FLIER BEATS RECORD, DIES IN CRASH

Today

Welcome, Eckener.
Says Bache to Block, Eheu.
News From Palestine.
Safer in the Air.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

DR. ECKENER, past 60 years, having to his credit and that of the German nation an accomplishment important to the human race, is honored as he should be, in Washington, New York and throughout the world.

THE nations also remember with gratitude Count Zeppelin, who devoted life and fortune to developing the dirigible which will always bear his name. Mr. Hoffman, chairman of the Steuben Society of America, reminds you that Zeppelin, as a young man, fought and made his first balloon ascension in our Civil War.

IT is for Americans, especially the President and other responsible for national safety, to learn from Dr. Eckener that the oceans have been made narrow.

Three days across the Pacific will soon be reduced to one day, a day and a half across the Atlantic to less than half a day.

Dr. Eckener has given us a "close-up" of Asia and Europe.

We look, now, into faces all friendly. It may not be so always.

No man can tell what will come in the kaleidoscope of war.

IN the big war a British antiaircraft bullet, badly aimed at a German airship went through a window in the House of Commons, damaging a painting of Nelson in his last battle.

The broken window and damaged painting are allowed to remain, reminding Britain that the allies of today may be the enemies of tomorrow.

In the battle that killed Nelson, England was fighting against France, and Germany was England's ally.

EHEU fugaces (whatever that may mean), said Jules Bache to Paul Block at the Dr. Eckener luncheon in New York yesterday. Block had received a memorandum saying that stocks were up $2 to $7 a share in spite of a rise in brokers' loans of $132,000,000.

SIGNING the Young agreement seems to have started a Wall Street boom. It takes little to do that, and Jules Bache, who lives in Wall street, felt sorry for the bears.

"WHAT goes up must come down," perhaps. But as Paul Block remarked, "Hope deferred maketh the heart sick, and the pocketbook sicker."

CONDITIONS in Palestine, reported better yesterday morning, are gloomy today.

The seizure by British troops of Arab chiefs, at the gates of Jerusalem, apparently did not discourage the Arabs. The Jewish Telegraphic Agency reports nine killed at Safed and the town in flames.

THAT Moslem hatred is directed at other religions indiscriminately is shown in the attack on a Catholic settlement at Latrun, in which one priest was killed and many others wounded.

JEWISH population in Palestine is estimated at 150,000. Correct figures are not available. A census in 1922 showed 86,794 Jews, a number since greatly increased.

The proportion of American Jews is small, only 2,000, according to our State Department.

THE British are earnestly at work in Jerusalem trying to undo what Jewish residents there, and sympathizers here, call Great Britain's neglect.

Above the Mosque of Omar, sacred to Mohammedans, close by the Wailing Wall, where Jews to this day mourn the destruction of the Temple, British planes circle throughout the daylight hours.

ARABS, indifferent to death for themselves, know what one small bomb would do to their sacred Mosque.

The wise British, however, only frighten. They would not willingly offend any religion under the British flag. They learned a lesson in the Sepoy rebellion.

AS Dr. Eckener returns safely from his air trip around the world in 21 days, you read of a coast liner sunk in collision, 74 missing.

"Air roads," 10 miles high, 25,000 miles around, with no icebergs, and no storms, six miles up, will soon be far safer than any land or water travel.

STANDARD OIL OF NEW YORK has cut the price of gasoline three cents. That means real war, perhaps intended to discourage the British "Shell" Company which has come among us to compete with American oil.

A price war will not break the hearts of automobile owners.

But it will not help the oil situation.

THE British would not postpone the Schneider Cup race at Italy's request.

Nevertheless, Italy will compete and a surprise is probable. One Italian plane has flown 360 miles an hour. Another, a Piaggio, new in design, rests on the water with no floats, its wings touching the water, and rising with the water propeller.

TWO British planes have flown in public more than 350 miles an hour. Their speed limit is kept secret.

This richest nation, which invented the airplane, is not represented in the race.

In Italy Mussolini, in England the British government, are intensely interested in aviation.

Our government is intensely interested in saving a few dollars.

It might begin, if it really wants to save, with a congressional investigation of the Federal Reserve and its reasons for putting this nation on a usury basis.

BRITISH SHIP BOMBARDS ARABS

Holy Land Rioting Continues; American Rabbi and Wife Reported Killed

International News Service.

CAIRO, Egypt, Aug. 31.—A British warship was reported today to have opened fire upon Arabs massing in the region of Haifa, on the Palestine coast, killing 30 and wounding 40.

The first report from Haifa, garbled in transmission, gave the name of the ship as the "Cruiser Durham." As British naval lists do not contain any cruiser of that name, it is believed to be the cruiser Barham, recently ordered to Palestine waters from Malta.

RABBI, WIFE SLAIN

JERUSALEM, Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Rabbi Samuel Cohen and his wife, believed to be Americans, were killed in the attack by Arab Moslems Thursday night on ancient Safed, northern Galileean city.

Arabs last night attacked the Jewish colony at Gederah, and later burned the granary in the colony of Kfarbaruch. Children of the colony Bethalphia were moved to Tel-Aviv for safety.

The greatest fear was held generally of movement of tribes in northern Syria. Airplanes patroled the southern colonies.

British military in Palestine, harassed by disorders within the mandated territory itself, moved today to check a full-fledged although disorganized invasion by Syrian and Trans-Jordanian Arabs.

ARAB INVASION

"Considerable forces" of the Mussulmans were said officially to be entering Palestine from Syria and airplanes and troops were dispatched to intercept and ascertain their strength. Incursions of Arabs from trans-Jordania have been checked so that they are not getting across the border in great numbers, but the infiltration has continued nevertheless.

The Arab force, according to word received in official quarters was moving south. A party of Jewish high school students, including 14 Americans, was near the Syrian frontier on an outing and an appeal was made to the American consul for protection for them in view of the Arab advance.

COLONIES ENDANGERED

The position of isolated Jewish colonies in the Jordan Valley greatly alarmed authorities. The situation of Tiberias was regarded as particularly dangerous and ener-

BRUINS IN FINAL STAND HERE

The Cubs are due to make their farewell appearance at Forbes Field this afternoon and not one of the first-place band is shedding any tears over the impending departure. They came to Pittsburgh last Wednesday morning to find very little hospitality as soon as they reached the Oakland Orchard. A double setback on that day was bitter medicine, but it was not much harder to take than the single defeat of the two following days. The fourth setback sustained yesterday carried a shutout misery, the score being 15 to 0.

The game will start at 3 o'clock.

Girl Asks Remus Adoption Be Annulled

CINCINNATI, Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Ruth Remus, daughter of Kate Augusta Remus and adopted daughter of George Remus, filed a petition in probate court for annulment of the adoption. In another petition she asked restoration of her former name, Ruth Holmes.

Miss Remus was adopted by the former "bootleg king" January 3, 1922. In the petition she stated she believed it would be to her advantage and to that of Remus if her former name were restored, considering the circumstances surrounding the death of her mother, who was shot and killed by Remus, October 6, 1927. Remus was acquitted of the shooting on grounds of insanity, and later was freed from the Lima State Hospital for the Criminal Insane when he was found sane.

SEEK FANATIC IN DUAL KILLING

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 31.—(AP.)—A young religious fanatic, known only as Fred, was being sought by the police for questioning in connection with the mysterious killing of Miss Ruth Laughlin, 24, and her escort, Paul Leslie Odell, 19, who were found dead yesterday below Cliff Drive, a popular lovers' trysting place. Police believe the victims were murdered.

The man sought is known to have met Miss Laughlin several days ago at a tent meeting. He proposed marriage and threatened the girl if she dared to refuse, police learned.

Pieces of letters, found near the scene of the crime, were believed at first to afford a definite clue to the murderer. Pieced together the letters were found to have been written to Virgil Anderson, a young mill worker, by his wife who is in Oologah, Okla. Anderson was cleared of any connection with crime when it developed the letters were strewn along the short cut he took to work every morning.

Odell's red car was found late last night by police at a city intersection almost two miles from where it had been parked by its owner.

Miss Laughlin was choked and beaten to death. Her body was found more than a block and a half from that of her escort, who had been shot in the head.

Mexican Candidate Misses Assassins

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 31.—(AP.)—An attempt to assassinate Jose Vasconcelos, presidential nominee of the anti-re-electionist party, was revealed here last night at a demonstration by several hundred members of the party. A speaker addressing the deminstrators at the doors of La Universal, Mexico City newspaper, asserted Vasconcelos owed his life to the fact that his chauffeur lost his way and did not pass by a spot on the road near Santa Buenaventura, Coahuila, where five would-be assassins lay in wait to ambush him.

Chicago Musicians Threaten Strike

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Unless an agreement with theater owners is reached, 800 members of the Chicago musicians' union will walk out Sunday at midnight, and, according to James C. Petrillo, head of the union, will "stay out until the public demands something besides the amplified records which have been pounding the ears of theater-goers." Disagreement over wage adjustments and over replacement of musicians with sound machines has brought about the strike threat.

Fourteenth Ward Voters Show Interest in Poll

Voters of the Fourteenth Ward, Squirrel Hill, give Judge Richard W. Martin strong support in the latest returns in the mayoralty straw vote poll of Pittsburgh by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and enable him to maintain his lead over Mayor Charles H. Kline and President of Council James F. Malone.

The standing of the candidates follows:

Martin	607
Kline	535
Malone	464

The tally of ballots for the day is: Martin 123, 80 men and 43 women; Kline 109, 80 men and 29 women; Malone 97, 66 men and 31 women. The bulk of the Martin vote comes from the Fourteenth Ward, in which he is given 88 votes, with 58 for Kline and 44 for Malone.

This ward shows the largest total of ballots in the poll and gives Martin a considerable advantage over either of his two opponents. The present standing in the ward, after three days' receipts of ballots, is: Martin 192, 115 men and 77 women; Malone 89, 57 men and 32 women; Kline 82, 54 men and 29 women.

The Fourteenth and Seventh Wards have contributed about 70 per cent of Martin's vote in the poll.

Approximately 20,000 ballots have now been mailed to registered voters in 18 wards of the city. A ballot is mailed to every fifth voter on the registry lists in each district of the city.

ZEP FUELED FOR FLIGHT HOME

Ship to Carry 17 Passengers, Big Cargo of Mail and Freight on Ocean Flight

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 31.—With the world still marvelling over her achievement in bringing the far-flung corners of the earth closer together than ever before in history, the great German dirigible, Graf Zeppelin, bids farewell to America tonight.

The Zeppelin is returning to her home port of Friedrichshafen, Germany, leaving behind her a record for speedy circumnavigation of the earth.

But the Graf is not returning to inactivity or retirement. Great ventures still lie ahead of her. More flights across the Atlantic, to South America as well as to the United States, are on the ambitious program mapped out for the huge air liner.

ARCTIC TRIP PLANNED

And the inhospitable Arctic, whose fringes the Graf touched on her sweeping flight across Siberia on the Hearst-Zeppelin round-the-world tour, may play host to the triumphant dirigible before many months have passed. Plans are under way for an exploration flight of the Arctic expanses in the gigantic craft.

At an early hour this morning, the re-gassing and refueling of the liner for her return flight across the Atlantic were virtually completed. Dr. Hugo Eckener, the Zeppelin's commander, who has turned over control to his first officer, Capt. Ernest Lehmann, for the crossing, ordered this work to be concluded by 8 o'clock tonight.

But the expert crew of the naval air station here, familiar with dirigibles and all the details attendant upon their preparation for long flights, worked at top speed and has completed the task in record time.

CARRIES BIG CARGO

According to present indications, the huge ship will be walked from her hangar shortly before midnight tonight, and if weather conditions are satisfactory, will immediately take the air for her flight home.

Three thousand pounds of cargo and a huge supply of mail will be

74 DEATHS LAID TO SHIP SPEED

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 31.—With a new check adding half a dozen more probable victims, the list of missing in the steamship San Juan disaster rose today to 74.

The exact total of fatalities may never be determined, it was disclosed by A. E. Gillespie, president of the company that operated the San Francisco-Los Angeles liner which foundered at midnight Thursday after a collision with an oil tanker.

Gillespie pointed out there may have been extra passengers who boarded the San Juan just before she sailed and purchased tickets from the purser after the vessel cleared port.

TANKER BLAMED

Charges that the Standard Oil tanker S. C. T. Dodd was sailing through the fog at excessive speed without a proper lookout and without sounding the required signals when she rammed and sank the San Juan in a heavy fog off the Santa Cruz coast were made by the San

Sister Ship of Sunken Vessel In Crash

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Aug. 31.—(AP.)—The White Flyer Line steamer Humboldt, sister ship of the ill-fated San Juan, which sank off Pigeon Point after being rammed by the S. C. T. Dodd, was in another crash at approximately the same hour as the San Juan disaster, it was reported here.

The Humboldt rammed the fishing barge Jane L. Stanford, anchored in Santa Barbara channel.

A hole was torn in the Stanford's hull, and the barge had sunk almost to the water line. The liner was slightly damaged.

Wyoming Senator, 86, Seeks Office Again

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Senator F. E. Warren, 86, dean of the United States Senate, said today it would be difficult to "turn a deaf ear to their wishes" if the people of the state felt "it is to their best interests that I be a candidate for re-election to the United States Senate." It was the senator's first utterance regarding whether he would be a candidate at the next general election.

Senator Warren has served Wyoming as a senator for 39 years.

SQUIRREL HILL PASTOR DIES

The Rev. John R. Melvin, 44, of St. Philomena's Catholic Church, Beechwood boulevard and Forward avenue, Squirrel Hill, died yesterday afternoon at Asheville, N. C., following an appendicitis operation.

Father Melvin, who was born and raised at Johnstown, had been ill for a year and had just recovered his health at St. Joseph's Sanitarium when he suffered a sudden attack on Wednesday. The body will be returned to Pittsburgh and burial will be made from his parish.

A graduate of Johnstown parochial schools, Father Melvin received his training at St. Mary's College, Northeast, Pa., and Mt. St. Alphonsus, Esopus, N. Y. He was ordained June 7, 1916, and served at New York, Baltimore and Boston, coming here from the latter city three years ago. He was well known as a missionary and author.

Nobile's Rescuer Plans Sea Flight

ROME, Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Major Maddalena, one of Italy's foremost birdmen, hopes soon to add the laurels of a trans-Atlantic crossing to those he gained in locating Gen. Umberto Nobile and his companions of the ill-fated Italia on the ice near Spitzbergen last year. He plans to take off in November in a non-stop flight from Rome to New York, by way of the Madeira Islands and Cuba.

Jail Welcomes Back Man Freed by Mistake

The doors of the County Jail were opened enthusiastically today to receive Tony Sanha, 22, of 1345 Braddock avenue, Braddock.

Tony walked out of the jail three months ago in place of another man because of similarity of names, he told Magistrate W. J. Soost in Frankstown Avenue Police Court when arraigned charged with larceny and entering a building.

He was held for court and 20 minutes later was welcomed within the big stone building at Ross street and Fifth avenue. At the time of his escape he was being held on a larceny charge, according to jail attendants.

At the hearing today, Joseph Price, owner of a clothing store at 6272 Frankstown avenue, testified Sanha entered his store Thursday, grabbed four women's coats valued at $50 each and ran out. He was captured at the East Liberty Station, Pennsylvania Railroad, as he was about to board a taxicab, police said.

PLANE FALLS AS PILOT DOZES

Up Nearly 38 Hours, Man Seeking Honeymoon Cash Killed; Lady Heath Better

CLEVELAND, Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Pilot Thomas Reid crashed to earth and was killed here early today, a short time after he had established a new record for solo endurance flights, exceeding by at least two hours the old mark of 36 hours, 56 minutes and 36 seconds.

The plane disappeared about 3 o'clock this morning, watchers at the airport said. At dawn the wreckage was found.

Reid's home was in Downey, Cal.

The plane was found shattered against a tree in Fairview village by Pilots Bill Butters, chief pilot of the Stewart Aircraft Corporation and Dale F. Dryer, who went up to look for Reid at daybreak.

BELIEVED ASLEEP

Flying about the vicinity of the airport, they saw the plane shattered near the tree, with Reid's body lying 25 feet away. Dryer said that the only conclusion was that Reid had gone to sleep. A wing was torn from the plane when it struck the tree, and its emergency fuel was found unused. Dryer said that he believed Reid fell almost immediately after he first was reported missing. He estimated the time of the crash a shortly after 2 a. m.

Timers in the attempt were still at their watch at the airport when the body was found. Dryer said he and Butters called an ambulance after landing near the scene of the crash, and returned to the airport to notify officials of the Emsco Company, backers of the flight.

Reid's wife in Downey was notified.

The record which Reid established will not stand, inasmuch as the rules of the American Aeronautical Association provide that planes in altitude and endurance flights must come to earth at the point of taking off. The present record, held by Lieut. Herbert J. Fahy, therefore, will stand.

Reid had just been married and was flying, he said, for money on which to go on his honeymoon. The ceremony was performed the day before he left California to attend the national air races here. Each hour he remained aloft above the record meant an added $100 to his fee for flying the plane from a fund posted by the air races committee.

The Emsco Aircraft Company, of

SEDITION CASE APPEAL FILED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Peter Muselin, Tom Zima and Milan Resetar appealed to the Supreme Court to set aside sentences of five years' imprisonment and a $500 fine imposed on each in 1927, on being found guilty of violating the Pennsylvania sedition act.

The men were charged with conduct tending to bring about an outbreak of violence against the state by urging the people of Woodlawn, Beaver County, Pa., to acquire ammunition and band together for the destruction of the state and national government.

The state sedition act was declared in the brief filed to be unconstitutional. The brief also asserted that the manner of their trial was such as to deprive the convicted men of their rights without due process and that the evidence was insufficient to support conviction.

SOVIET YIELDS TO CHINA; ARBITRATION AGREED ON

WAR MENACE IN FAR EAST REMOVED

Nationalist Terms Accepted By Russia; Disputes to Be Settled in Conference

By EDWARD L. DEUSS,
International News Service.

MOSCOW, Aug. 31.—One of the most serious menaces to world peace since the armistice was signed was completely removed today with the official agreement of the Soviet government to settle all outstanding disputes with China by means of arbitration.

The Soviet commissariat of foreign affairs announced that the government had accepted Chinese proposals for conclusion of a joint declaration settling the outstanding disputes which a few weeks ago threatened to throw the Far East into chaos of war.

The Chinese proposals were embodied in a note from the Nanking government delivered to the Soviet foreign office on August 28. Agreeing to return to the status existing under terms of the agreement of 1924, the Chinese government requested Russia to sign the declaration promising peaceful settlement of all questions.

NEW MANAGER

Under the terms of the agreement, Russia will appoint a new manager for the Chinese Eastern Railway, thereby abandoning earlier demands that the official in charge at the time the line was seized by Chinese authorities, be reinstated.

Both sides will appoint representatives to arbitrate the issues. One of the chief points of discussion will be the insistence of China that Soviet employes of the railway refrain from dissemination of propaganda in Manchuria.

The concessions granted by Russia in reaching this agreement are hailed by Soviet observers as proof of the anxiety of this nation to maintain peace and keep inviolate the Kellogg pact at any cost.

STARTED BY SEIZURE

The trouble between Russia and China started when the Nanking government seized entire control of the Chinese Railway, arresting and deporting Soviet employes on the grounds they were undermining the Chinese administration by disseminating Communist propaganda.

Relations between the two nations became strained to the point of rupture of diplomatic exchanges, and troops were rushed by both sides to the Manchuria border. Several clashes took place, but few casualties occurred.

MORE INDUSTRY FOR CITY VITAL, KLINE HOLDS

Addresses Homewood Meeting; Malone and Martin Campaigns Are Pushed

Pittsburgh must attract industriesc of a diversified nature in order to progress, Mayor Charles H. Kline declared at a meeting in the Homewood Carnegie Library last night.

The bed rock industries of iron and steel should be supplemented by others, he said.

"We must bend every effort to foster and encourage these industries," he said. "But we have arrived at the stage where we can no longer hide from ourselves the fact that in addition to these parent industries, we must have others of a diversified nature, they will not interfere with the religious services, his next term will see Sunday motion pictures in Westinghouse Park.

C. J. McBride, Republican chairman of the Thirty-first Ward, announced that he intended to support Mayor Kline for re-election. He has arranged to open Kline headquarters in the Thirty-first Ward at 431 Baldwin street.

The mayoralty campaign has apparently settled down to intensive drives for votes and a long series of speeches. Even the return of former States Chairman W. L. Mellon failed to bring forth more than the persistent rumor that County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong is ready to declare for Kline. Adherents of both the Kline and Malone factions have been eagerly seeking his support.

URGE REGISTRATION

Meanwhile the rival organization candidates, as well as Judge Richard W. Martin, seeking the Republican nomination as an independent, pushed their drives to get their friends registered next Thursday.

The Kline administration has been "a period of noticeable inactivity," declared Councilman Robert Garland, speaking last night over KDKA in behalf of the Malone candidacy.

"Mr. Malone is as solid as the Rock of Gibraltar," he said. "In the national election last November he held his home ward, the Fifth, firmly in line for President Hoover, while all around him other Republican leaders saw their wards go Democratic."

LANG QUOTES GRAY

Speaking in behalf of Mayor Kline last night over KDKA, Assistant Solicitor Charles P. Lang quoted Judge James H. Gray to prove that the attacks upon the administration by Judge Martin are unfounded. Judge Gray is a Martin supporter. Lang declared that on August 26, 1929, Judge Gray said:

"Crime is not nearly so big in Pittsburgh as elsewhere. Likewise our system of caring for and dealing with the criminal is in advance of other cities. I find the world very beautiful in traveling, but there is no place better than Pittsburgh, every way you take it."

Dr. C. J. Steim, speaking for Martin over KQV, declared that the present campaign marks an unusual opportunity for the people of Pittsburgh "to break the vicious circle of machine politics which now surrounds the administration of our city's affairs."

ANSWERS ATTACK

The attack of Assistant United States District Attorney Ralph H. Smith upon Judge Martin was answered today in a statement by Alexander P. Lindsay. Smith accused Martin of having been a factionalist all his political career and of blocking a councilmanic probe into racketeering during the administration of Mayor William A. Magee.

WILKINS AND BRIDE

LADY WILKINS AND SIR HUBERT WILKINS

Today Suzanne Bennett, Australian actress, is Lady Wilkins, wife of the noted South Pole explorer who was a passenger on the Hearst-Zeppelin World-Flight. They were married in Cleveland by a justice of the peace.

WILKINS BUILDS 'SUB' FOR POLE

CLEVELAND, Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins, Arctic aeronautical explorer who yesterday was married in a simple ceremony to Miss Suzanne Bennett, Australian actress, announced today that construction will start soon on his specially designed submarine to be used in geographical and meteorological explorations in South Polar regions.

Wilkins, knighted for his 2,200 mile flight over the North Pole from Point Barrow, Alaska, to Green Harbor, Svalbard, Norway, in 1928, said the order for construction of the submarine had been placed, and that the expedition would start about December 15. He said it was in no way in competition with the explorations of Com. Richard E. Byrd, whose camp now is in the Antarctic.

Wilkins and Miss Bennett appeared before a justice of the peace for the ceremony yesterday. They were unattended.

Prohibition Agents Stage Six Raids

Prohibition agents yesterday made six raids and confiscated liquor.

The raiders arrested Charles Uphoff, proprietor of a second floor saloon at 4736 Liberty avenue, where they reported seizing moonshine and home brew. The residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Phillips, 419 Craft avenue, was visited and 12 quarts of home brew was reported found. A small quantity of moonshine was reported found in the home of Mrs. Joseph Frank, 518 Fourth avenue, Homestead. Eight gallons of beer was reported found in the home of John Dobos, 518½ Fourth avenue, Homestead. One pint of ale was reported seized from the home of Mrs. Mary Broush, Freeport road, Acmetonia.

7,000 Westmoreland Parochial Pupils

HONOR EDISON AT AIR SHOW

CLEVELAND, Aug. 31.—Tribute to Thomas A. Edison bearing expressions of gratitude for the aid his incandescent lamp has rendered a still later scientific achievement, the airplane, marked today's program at the national air races.

The golden jubilee of Edison's invention is in progress this year. Participants in the races, derbies, maneuvers and exhibitions at the air show joined the celebration in acknowledging the benefit which his electric light became to aeronautics, a service unforeseen when the lamp was completed. Climaxing the observance was a race from Cleveland to the Edison birthplace at Milan, O., to be flown tonight.

FRIENDS PARTICIPATE

Among the participants were many of Edison's old friends. Henry Ford, Harvey Fireston, Brig. Gen. W. E. Gilmore and others, joined in planning the tribute. The inventor was unable to attend because of danger to his health.

The Rim-of-Ohio derby got away yesterday with four pilots participating. Loren Mendell, of Los Angeles, led the fliers to the overnight control point at Dayton last night. Prizes of $2,000 are offered.

Two pilots, Roscoe Turner and John P. Wood, entered in the Los Angeles to Cleveland non-stop event, started this morning. They must exceed a time of 12 hours 58 minutes and 10 seconds established Monday by Lee Schoenhair, Los Angeles.

BROWN DELAYED

Lieut. Henry J. Brown also entered in the derby, was scheduled to start this morning, but postponed his flight shortly before Capt. Turner, with his mechanic, Russell Peck, left for the East. Peck will pump gasoline into the wing tank of Turner's craft from five-gallon cans carried in the cabin. Five hundred gallons of fuel were carried on the flight.

Brown set midnight as his starting time.

Col. Art Goebel, another entrant, planned to leave Wichita, Kan., today in a Cessna monoplane and reach here in time for a Sunday start for Cleveland. He must reach Los Angeles before the termination of the races Monday to qualify for the event.

Turner recently flew with three passengers from Los Angeles to New York and return in approximately 42 hours. He has been flying since the World War, in which he served as a balloonist.

Two Men Injured In Auto Accidents

WASHINGTON, Pa., Aug. 31.—Two men suffered leg fractures in automobile accidents within a few minutes of each other. George Pounds was admitted to the hospital with a broken leg received when he was thrown in a crash of two machines. James Nelson, of Burgettstown, was admitted to the hospital with a fractured knee, received when his motorcycle hit an automobile.

Horse's Kick Latest In Boy's Mishap List

BLACKBURN, England, Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Five-year-old Peter Lancaster will be quite a fellow if business keeps up. He has been run over by a horse and by a bicycle; he has fallen out of a window and dropped from a roof on to a ledge; he has tumbled into a canal. Now he's in a hospital again, having been kicked in the face by a horse.

74 DEATHS LAID TO SHIP'S SPEED

Juan owners in a suit filed in Federal Court, demanding $1,800,000 damages.

Meanwhile an investigation has been launched to determine the blame, if possible, for one of the worst maritime disasters in the history of this section of the Pacific Coast.

It was at first reported the two ships collided in a dense fog. Later reports disclosed the lights of the ships were discernible to each other, although a blanket of fog enveloped them shortly after the crash.

Only the purser would know how many unlisted passengers the San Juan carried, Gillespie explained, and the purser was not among the survivors. Gillespie believed, however, that the belated passengers would not number more than three or four.

11 SURVIVORS LANDED

Eleven more survivors, four of them injured, arrived in San Francisco today on the coast guard cutter Shawnee. The ill-fated craft, according to revised figures, carried 66 passengers and a crew of 50. Forty-two passengers and seamen were rescued.

Limping into San Francisco under her own power, her bow plates torn and dented, the S. C. T. Dodd brought the bulk of the stunned and injured survivors.

Among the survivors were 22 of the San Juan's crew and only 18 passengers. Only three of the 23 women on the ship's passenger list were saved. The bodies of several women who perished were picked up by the coast guard cutter Tahoe.

True to marine tradition, Capt. Adolph F. Asplund, aged skipper of the San Juan, went down with his charge.

"I was standing near him," reported Steward George Haines. "He shouted to me, 'Why don't you jump, you fool!' I jumped."

Capt. Asplung had retired from the sea and was called back to substitute for the regular master, who was on vacation.

Capt. Hugo Bleumchen, master of the Dodd, today described frantic efforts he said his crew made to avert the accident.

TRIED TO AVERT CRASH

"From the bridge I saw the San Juan bearing across our starboard bow perhaps a quarter of a mile away," he said.

"I immediately ordered the engines full astern. After that I heard the San Juan blow her whistle three times, indicating she too was in reverse. Our helm was to port, as we would cross the stern of the other ship. If the San Juan had proceeded ahead she would have crossed our bow and the collision would have been avoided.

"The San Juan sank within three minutes after the crash.

Possibility of any of the missing being found alive was considered remote. The waters are icy cold.

From Santa Cruz northward to Half Moon Bay, watchers lined the coast on the lookout for bodies.

Survivors of Sea Tragedy Tell How Victims Died

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Scenes of tragedy and horror accompanying the sinking of the passenger vessel San Juan were reviewed by the 42 survivors here today.

Stories of the 31 survivors picked up by the Standard Oil tanker Dodd, which collided with the San Juan, indicated that there has been little chance for the survival of the more than three score on the missing list.

MOTHER SAVES BOY—DIES

Little Hollis Pifer, 6 years old, of Los Angeles, rode in on the after deck of the tanker Dodd yesterday, the only child survivor of the San Juan sinking.

The story of his rescue is one of the dramatic instances of a heart-rending catastrophe. It is the story of a mother's first thought of her child.

When the Dodd rammed the San Juan, Mrs. Marjorie Pifer ran out on deck with the child in her arms. The ships were interlocked, the Dodd's bow buried deep in the San Juan's side. Mrs. Pifer hurled her son into the air. He landed on the deck of the Dodd, looming above. The ships pulled apart and the mother went down with the San Juan.

"Mother kissed me before she threw me." Hollis sobbed today.

BOAT UPSET

An account of the sinking by Harry A. Wade, a San Juan passenger:

"At the danger whistles I immediately assisted in marshalling a lifeboat off the davits and entered the water with a woman and a child and two men," said Wade. "We rode 10 yards from the sinking ship when it plunged. The whirlpool threw the lifeboat in the air and we all fell into the water.

"I started swimming and looked for the woman and the child, but could find no trace of them. One person floated close to me. I made a grab for him, but he sank.

"Swimming around there I could hear the last screams of the terror-stricken people as they were pulled down into the vortex created by the sinking ship."

GIVES UP LIFEBELT—DIES

Senorita Rosa Rulfo, a practicing attorney of Mexico City who is but 20 years old, told how her brother, J. Rulfo, gave her his lifebelt and went down with the ship.

LOSES FALSE TEETH

Alex Cowie, a passenger, said he was carried down by the suction of the sinking ship, but was heaved back to the surface when the San Juan's boilers exploded. He said the concussion which forced him up and probably saved his life caused him to lose a new set of false teeth.

TWO BODIES FOUND

The coast guard cutter Shawnee up to today had located only two bodies of two women, unidentified expect for the initials "J. L. M." on a ring on the hand of one.

SCREAMS—THEN SILENCE

"They were shouting, crying, calling for life preservers," said George H. Houghton, Los Angeles business man.

"Some were praying, someone was swearing. There must have been lots of persons in the water, because I could hear many screams. Then it became deathly still. A thousand things ran through my mind. I must have lived an eternity in six or seven minutes."

SAVED BY BOX

L. B. Heatley, of Manila, described the scene as "terrible. I heard women crying and shrieking for boats to come. People were clinging to boxes. I held onto a large tool box until rescued."

KIN FRANTIC

Several persons collapsed in the frantic crowd that beseiged the Los Angeles offices of the company operating the San Juan, in search of news from relatives aboard the ship, but they were able to learn but little. Several were sent home in ambulances.

ALIVE—SOLD HIS TICKET

R. O. Gorman, of Los Angeles, was spared the ordeal of the wreck when he sold his ticket to Willis Barton also of Los Angeles. Barton sailed on the San Juan and apparently perished.

Downey, backed his flight. The last greeting he gave officials of the company late yesterday was in clasping his hands above his head, a signal that everything was well aloft as long as his fuel lasted. He was flying a cabin monoplane.

Last August 14 he attempted to set a new record for non-refueled endurance flights for two pilots with Emory Bronte, finance of Marvel Crosson, aviatrix, killed in the Women's derby in the National air races last week.

His death was the fifth to occur during the races. In addition to Miss Crosson, Pilot E. J. Devereaux, Mrs. Devereaux and his mechanic were killed in a crash at Boston during the Philadelphia to Cleveland derby.

Lady Mary Heath, the famous British flier, who was injured seriously in the crash of her plane here, was reported somewhat improved today.

At the Lakeside Hospital, where she underwent a delicate operation for removal of bone pressing against the brain, it was stated that she regained consciousness for a brief period last night.

Her first words were to ask regarding progress of the national air races now under way here. Lady Heath was testing a plane for use in the races when the crash occurred.

Dodd, which rammed and sank the steamer San Juan today, was named for the first solicitor of the Standard Oil Company and reputed organizer of the Standard Oil trust. carried by the Graf to Friedrichshafen for distribution all over Europe. The freight to be carried ranges from lawn mowers to women's pajamas, and includes machine castings, oils, shoes, scientific instruments and a radio set for use of King Alfonso of Spain.

A total of 875,000 cubic feet of fuel gas was pumped into the Zeppelin's cells during yesterday and last night. Hydrogen was added to counterbalance the large cargo that is being stowed away aboard.

Repairs have been completed on the Graf's rudder, damaged when the ship's tail scraped when taking off from Los Angeles on the last lap of the flight.

17 PASSENGERS BOOKED

A large force of police will be assigned to augment the naval guard when the ship takes off tonight, due to the expectation that thousands of persons will make it part of their holiday to see the Graf start on its trans-Atlantic flight.

Seventeen passengers, including eight who were not aboard the Graf on her globe-girdling flight, will be in the gondola when the ship starts at midnight. The new passengers are Lieut. Com. H. V. Wiley, commanding officer of the United States Navy dirigible Los Angeles; John W. Schnitzer, president of the First National Bank of Froid, Mont.; R. A. Bogan, Syracuse, N. Y.; Edward P. Frost, Pelham Manor, N. Y.; Dr. William M. School, Chicago, and Mrs. Charles B. Parker, Cleveland.

OFFICIAL BALKS SUIT ON ZEP

NAVAL AIR STATION, LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 31.—(AP.)—A very small under-sheriff of Ocean County tried in vain yesterday to attach a very large Graf Zeppelin.

Otto Hillig, Liberty, N. Y., photographer, had brought suit against the operators of the Graf for $125,000 damages because they refused to carry him around the world. He booked passage with the Hamburg-American Line, the Zeppelin's accredited agents. At the last moment he was informed he could not go. Owing to a misunderstanding Hamburg-American officials had counted on three places and in the final shakeup were allotted only two.

The court at Tom's River ordered the under-sheriff to attach the Zeppelin. Commander Maurice R. Pierce, in charge at Lakehurst, refused to accept the writ on the ground that the airship was on government property.

Fagg, Jr., chosen as managing director. Prof. Fagg for the last year has been managing director of the Air Law Institute at Koenigsburg, Germany.

PLANES TRY OUT MAIL PICKUP

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 31.—Tests of a device to receive and discharge mail from airplanes flying over airports were made here yesterday at Landsowne Field. The Cleveland-to-Pittsburgh mail plane delivered one sack of mail and picked up another on the second try. The Pittsburgh-to-Cleveland plane failed in two tries, the 75-foot cable snapping each time the plane swooped down to the field and passed over the paraphernalia.

The tests were conducted under the scrutiny of Postoffice Department officials from Washington, Cleveland, Pittsburgh and Beaver Falls. They expressed the opinion that the device will greatly increase air mail service possibilities when it is developed.

The invention is that of Dr. Lytle S. Adams, of Seattle, Wash. It is a huge funnel-shaped apparatus into which the aviator trails a sack of mail on a 75-foot cable. The sack is snapped through the narrow end of the funnel and mechanism is operated by the impact which releases the incoming sack and snaps the outgoing sack on the end of the cable.

The trials were made on the Ball lines mail route. Clifford Ball, of Pittsburgh, a pioneer in airmail contracting, supervised the tests with Dr. Adams.

EAKER RESUMES REFUEL TEST

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Capt. Ira K. Eaker, pilot of the endurance plane Shuttle, took off in the reconditioned ship for New York at 7:10 a. m. (E. S. T.) this morning to prepare for a new attempt at a record for refueled, linear distance flights. He was accompanied by his co-pilot, Lieut. Bernard Thompson.

The two pilots landed here Wednesday, on the first attempt when an oil can fell from the refueling ship and burst, spurting oil into the cockpits and leading them to believe a main lubricating line had broken. They will fly between New York and Ooakland, Cal., in an attempt to etablish a minimum distance record of 25,000 miles. Refueling points en route will be at Cleveland, Omaha, Cheyenne and Elko.

Almost unbelievable acts of cruelty were committed by the Moslem raiders upon their Jewish victims at Motza, one of the villages recently attacked and pillaged by the Arab hordes.

The correspondent quotes the sister in charge of the Hebron Hospital as describing the Arab massacre of Jewish residents and students in that town the worst in her memory.

"I have seen pogroms in Poland," she is quoted as saying, "but never have I witnessed such terrible sights as when maimed and injured Jews were brought in here."

RECORD CROWD FOR VET PICNIC

Preparations are complete for the tenth annual veterans' picnic at Kennywood today. A record turnout is expected from all Pittsburgh veteran organizations, with many independent ex-service men and women.

The vets will be met as they come into the park by members of the various committees, who will distribute to them cards which, filled in and presented at the dining hall with suitable identification will entitle them to tickets to the various park amusements opened to guests of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and Kennywood Park today.

Identification preferably will be by means of uniforms. It is hoped by the general committee, that, wherever possible, the uniforms of the ex-service men will be worn to the park. Discharrge papers, service buttons and organization pins and buttons, however, will provide satisfactory proof of identity.

At 8 o'clock in the evening, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph will be host to the veterans of the Civil War and disabled service men now in Pittsburgh hospitals at a big beefsteak dinner. The disabled service men will be brought to the park by the buses of the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company.

Salvation Army girls will pass out doughnuts and coffee; the Red Cross will be present for first aid, and everything is complete for the reception and handling of a mammoth crowd—the largest which has ever attended a reunion of the kind in this region.

If you haven't made arrangements to attend this get-together with your family or friends, hop into your car and roll out. It'll be great!

BEATING LAID TO COAL POLICE

Gov. John S. Fisher will receive a protest from the Pittsburgh branch, American Civil Liberties Union, alleging that William Burns, coal and iron policeman, abused and blackjacked Mike Dudash, former miner for the Consumers Mining Company at Harmarville. The letter asked that Burns be disciplined if an impartial investigation proves the alleged abuse.

The alleged attack took place in Harmarville Hollow. Dudash, the letter declares, drew up his car on the side of the road and was accosted by Burns who, after demanding to know where he was going, struck him and drew his revolver, chasing him down the road.

The letter concludes:

"We cannot emphasize too strongly that no amount of investigation after the event, and no amount of discipline can effectually protect the workers of this commonwealth, as long as the towns in which many of them live are owned by their employers and policed by individuals who are paid and directed by their employers.

"We believe that public opinion will inevitably demand not merely the punishment of an individual Coal and Iron policeman, nor the substitution of a newly-named industrial police, but the complete abolition of the entire iniquitous system."

Officials of the Consumers Mining Company declined to comment on the matter.

BRITON PRAISES PITTSBURGH'S ART CENTER

Urges "Progress" Salesmen To Visit Storehouse Of World Treasures

ALFRED P. PERRY is a young English newspaperman and holder of the Walter Hines Page Fellowship in Journalism for 1929. Under this fellowship, which was established some years ago by the English Speaking Union of the United States with the object of promoting fuller understanding of America in Great Britain through the medium of the press, British newspapermen are attached for periods amounting in all to one year to the staffs of leading papers in this country. During the three weeks which he will spend as a guest of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Mr. Perry will write his impressions of America and Pittsburgh from day to day.

By ALFRED P. PERRY

How many Pittsburghers have more than a hearsay knowledge of the fact that they possess a magnificent storehouse filled with the treasures of Nature and of art at their very doors?

Very few, one may suspect, unless they are different from the inhabitants of most other towns with such advantages. For usually it takes a country cousin to drag the citizen of a great metropolis out to see the sights of which he boasts so proudly when away from home.

There are two kinds of people in particular who should go to see what the Carnegie Institute contains. One is the person who is always prattling about "progress" and pitying the poor benighted past without its telephones and bathtubs. The other is the individual who always compares the works of man unfavorably with those of Nature, and takes a gloomy pleasure in proclaiming that humans are nothing but a race of puny bunglers.

SCULPTOR MODELS HERE

An hour in the institute will snow the "progress" salesman samples of sculpture, pottery and architecture which are still models today after the passage of 2,000 years. He will see the originals which have given birth to the buildings of the beautiful capital city of his country and to countless magnificent edifices throughout the modern world.

He will see earthenware pots dug from the graves of ancient Greeks which are the accepted models of good taste today. He will also see statues and sculptures carved hundreds of years before Christ was born, which have been the inspiration and despair of artists ever since.

In sculpture, it is true, the ancients had an unfair advantage over us. The flowing robes of Greek and Roman worthies gave the sculptor opportunities to produce graceful and dignified lines from even the most "bow-windowed" city councillor, for what can be done with long pants, a frock coat and a silk tile? Apollo himself would look commonplace in such a garb. And if the modern sculptor, throwing realism to the winds, decks the mayor in a Roman toga for the sake of art, he makes the poor man look as if he had been caught hurrying from a Turkish bath.

But in case these examples of ancient excellence prove too depressing to the apostle of all-round progress, he can console himself by going upstairs to the picture gallery. There he will find a little Flemish piece painted about 500 years ago which suggests that if there was good art then there was plenty of graft as well.

PICTURE DEPICTS GRAFT

The picture shows a crowd of men and women lining up to pay their month's rent to a couple of clerks who are poring over piles of accounts. These two are grinning happily at their task; and well they may, for each rent-payer has a small present waiting for them. A bunch of luscious grapes here, a dozen eggs there, a couple of chickens somewhere else make a little juggling with the accounts pleasant exercise for the brain. Human nature does not change so much.

The pessimist who is always complaining of the works of man should then make his way to the natural history department and see what monstrosities nature can produce when she tries.

The modern cow is not perhaps the most beautiful of creatures, but she is a model compared with the brontosaurus, which frolicked in Wyoming a few million years ago. This creature stands as high as a locomotive and has a neck 20 feet long, with an absurd little head on the end, and a 50-foot tail sprouting from a body one-quarter that length.

Then there is the dinosaur, which roamed Montana some time before the Chicago stock yards got busy on its long-horned successors. The cowboys of those days must have been mounted on elephants and surely used a steel cable for a lariat. Nothing smaller could have held a fractious dinosaur, for its head alone was about six feet long and three feet thick.

DEEP SEA NIGHTMARES

But for real nightmares the visitor should go to the deep sea room. Here he will find the giant squid, which has a body the shape and size of a torpedo and a dozen arms from 10 to 30 feet long sprouting from its nose. And beside it is an octopus, terror of divers and most horrible of sea beasts, with its eight 10-foot arms equipped with non-skid treads, and its single eye, large as a saucer in the very center of its flat round body. Decidedly it is unwise to visit this chamber of horrors last thing before going to bed.

But these are only a few of the gifts which the institute has to offer to the citizens of Pittsburgh. He who is interested in aviation can see the first aeroplane to fly across America—the strange looking machine in which the late Perry Rodgers covered the distance of 4,231 miles in three and a half days of flying time.

8 TOWNS ADDED TO 'AIR MAP' DISTRICT

Illuminated Guide Marks Irwin for Fliers; Firm Wins Guggenheim Award

By MAX HENRICI.

Reports in regard to towns that are putting up signs to guide aviators are coming in so fast that it is hard to keep track of them all.

Harry S. Hall is painting "NEW KENSINGTON" in yellow letters seven feet high on the roof of his big barn on the Seventh street road just outside the borough. He also will paint an arrow showing the direction of the nearest airport.

Rankin is being marked with a sign on the high school roof.

The West View Board of Trade plans to "air-mark" the town with a sign on a large garage there.

Fred J. Hicks, of Irondale, O., states that the community will soon be "airmarked."

AMBRIDGE MARKED

L. C. Barthelmeh, secretary of the Ambridge Board of Trade, reports: "We recently painted the sign "AMBRIDGE" on the roof of the cotton mill of the National Electric Products Corporation's local plant in letters 15 feet in height, and aviators tell us that the sign is very clear and entirely satisfactory."

Watson M. McKee, secretary of the McKeesport Chamber of Commerce, writes: "I am pleased to report that the city of McKeesport already has four buildings marked. Our Chamber of Commerce, having closely co-operated with the starting and development of Bettis Field, is always interested in anything which will promote the best interests of aviation."

B. D. Levaur of the Pittsburgh Reflector Company reports his company has been awarded a Guggenheim Fund certificate of distinguished service to aviation, signed by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, for "air-marking" Irwin. The company has put up the name of the town, with an arrow pointing to Bettis Field, on the roof of its plant at Irwin. The sign is brilliantly illuminated at night with floodlights to guide night fliers. It is said to be the only illuminated "air-mark" in the Pittsburgh district.

Elias Ritts, vice president of the Butler County National Bank, writes: "I am very much interested in your daily articles relative to aviation, and noticed especially your recent article calling attention to the importance of marking roofs so as to aid pilots flying in the vicinity of the Pittsburgh Airport.

BANKER LAUDS PLAN

"We here are especially interested in the Pittsburgh-Butler Airport. We feel that the pilots are entitled to every consideration, and the full co-operation of the people of the community, so that they can locate the field with the least amount of annoyance.

"We have marked the top of our bank building in large letters, yellow on black, giving the name of the town, as well as the north and south directions, and an arrow pointing to the airport."

The Pittsburgh Aviation Industries Corporation, Oliver Building, is co-operating with the Sun-Telegraph in the campaign to get the Pittsburgh territory thoroughly "air-marked" and will furnish government specifications as to signs and other information to those desiring advice.

COME TO CHURCH

The Church Is the Meeting Place of God and His People

SERMONETTE

"MAN'S ONE TRUE FRIEND"

JOHN—15:15

By REV. S. T. BROWN,
Pastor Forty-third Street Presbyterian Church

WHO of us has not read Tennyson's "In Memoriam," in which he sings in verse that will never die, his love for his lost Arthur? It was like the friendship that knit together the hearts of David and Jonathan, or drew Jesus to the home of Mary and Martha and Lazarus in his hours of loneliness. If we enjoy such friendship as that, our greatest darkness will have light, our blackest day a sun. Consider a few of the characteristics of a true friend.

He is always accessible. You will never find "No Admission" written upon his door. For you, at least, his latch-string is always out; his heart and his home are always open.

The true friend is always sympathetic. When he comes into your presence, he immediately tunes into your life. Your sorrow makes him sad; your joy gives a keener note to his rejoicing.

The true friend always construes you favorably. His judgments are never harsh. Instead of looking at your faults and failures and shortcomings, he looks at your good qualities and puts the emphasis upon them. He is compassionate and forgiving, overflowing with mercy.

A true friend is ready to sacrifice on your behalf. He will put himself out to help you up the hill and forego his own comfort to promote yours. The man who is not willing to aid you in time of trouble; the man who is too selfish to give you a lift when you are down, or hold you when your feet are slipping, is not your friend at all. Give me the friend who comes the closest when my need is greatest; the friend that stands by me in every hour of trouble; that nestles up to me when the world frowns; that will not pass me by on the other side, when I lie stripped and beaten and wounded on the road. To have such a friend is better than gold—better far than all the world's cheap applause.

Now in outlining all these qualities of the true friend, you observe we have simply been describing our Blessed Savior. He is always accessible, open to every cry of pain and need; no matter how sinful, no matter how guilty and vile our lives may be.

And as for his sympathy, it is too wonderful, too boundless, too infinite for our poor minds to grasp. Suffice it to say, that as a friend that sticketh closer than a brother, He is all compassion. He always sees what is best in men and appeals to that. Do you ask proof of His infinite unselfishness, of the boundless self-sacrifice that He was called to make? I point you to the old, old Cross. He is a Friend who never changes; we have our moods; we vary; we are now this and now that; but Jesus Christ is unchangeable, always the same, without variableness or shadow of turning. He is Man's One True Friend.

MEADOW LARKS GET MUSICAL AND RUIN MOVIE SCENE FOR HAROLD LLOYD

By DOROTHY HERZOG.

(Copyright, 1929, by Premier Syndicate).

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 31.

MR. AND MRS. AL JOLSON joined the big parade to the fights the other eve. It was hotter than blazes in the stadium. Whereupon Mrs. Jolson very quietly passed out of the picture. Bedlam. She was carried outside and revived in the cool air. Mrs. Al—who is Ruby Keeler in professional life—hasn't quite recuped from the operation she underwent in New York several weeks ago. Al, by the way, gets goin' pretty quick now on his next Vitaphoner, "Mammy."

Ruby Keeler

To Pasadena trekked Harold Lloyd, Barbara Kent and other members of the "Welcome Danger" kump. And located 'bout a quarter of a mile off the road. The bustle of getting cameras, mikes, light, etc., in shooting formation. All set. Rehearsal. Okeh. Lights, Interlock. Action. Suddenly, a flock of meadow larks burst into song. The scene was stamped "N. G." (No good.)

Quiet. Ready to go again. Lights. Interlock. Action. Zoom-Zoom-Zoom. Six army reserve airplanes from a nearby field noised above.

An hour later. And some semblance of peace. Harold and Barbara commenced to do their stuff when a wild voice screamed: "Fire!" and sure 'nuff, not so far away, a greedy blaze was licking across a field of dried grass. A score of fire engines sirened pass. Lloyd and his gang rushed to help fight the fire.

Well, that racket ended in due time. Harold returned to histrionic endeavors. The scene was nearly in the box when the shriek of a piccolo disturbed the ozone. A saxaphone joined in the agitation.

The Lloyd Kumpny said a few naughty words. Investigation disclosed a musical instrument school much too near for microphonic comfort. So the Flick troope called it a day and returned in a "mad" to ye village. Yep, troubles we got.

Alice Terry on Hollywood Visit

BUMPED into Alice Terry a-lunching with Shayle Gardner at ye Roosevelt. Alice says it isn't true 'atall that she will make a picture in Hollywood. Nope, she made the salty trek from Nice, Italy, to visit her mother, whom she hasn't seen for three years. And to attend to some real estate business. Alice owns a bungalow court and a few lots. Rex Ingram, her director-husband, asked her to see how his oil station was getting along. Alice looked and cabled Rex: "Your oil station that was isn't anymore." It just disappeared! Miss Terry returns to Europe in about two weeks and begins her first talky picture, Direction Mr. Ingram. Rex sold his studie in Nice to a foreign celluloid outfit. He and Alice lived near the studio in a lovely villa that was sold along with the studio. So they've purchased another home in Nice, and 'tis there that Alice returns.

Alice Terry

This Flick bureau is informed that a man in Philadelphia, yclept, James Smiley, has built what he terms a futuristic home modeled after sundry houses he has seen in motion pictures. It is lavish and simply amazing—this Mr. Smiley's residence, black, castiron palm trees are nailed to the side of the white mansion. Ditto cactus plants grace the lawn, and the inside is in keeping. James Smiley has a brother on the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, but that wouldn't necessarily stamp him an accomplice to the crime—if any . . .

Tom Patricola Sprains Ankle

THEIR REAL NAME DEPARTMENT: Douglas Fairbanks—Douglas Ollman.

You've heard the story about the chap who flew around the world only to return home and break his neck playing croquet?

Same holds slightly true of Tom Patricola. Tom is a dancing wow. He came West to make flicks for Mr. Fox and has danced in about five thus far. But Patricola didn't like this dancing man rep. "I'm an Actor," he argued to an exek. "Why don't you let me act?"

A few days later he got his chance. As an Italian in Paul Sloan's vocalloid, "Three Sisters," and the first morning on the set, Tom sprained his ankle. He refused to give up his role, however, and is emoting despite a bandaged ankle.

And that's all.

MODERN LIFE THEME OF FILMS

Modern life and youth forms the theme of two of the new photoplays. One of these is "Fast Life," now current in the Stanley. The other is "Our Modern Maidens." Joan Crawford's new picture, which opens in the Penn Monday. Incidentally, Joan's real life husband, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., has a part in both "Fast Life" and "Our Modern Maidens.

The Pitt attraction next week will be "The Scarlet Woman," a comedy.

Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell come to the Aldine Monday in "Lucky Star," a talkie.

Billie Dove's "Her Private Life," a talk film, opens in the Enright today.

Al Jolson's "Say It With Songs" is being seen for a second week in the Grand.

"The Sophomore," with Sally O'Neil, opens Monday in the Harris. It will be seen for three days, beginning Thursday, in the Sheridan Square.

Next week's burlesque show in the Academy will be "Girls in Blue."

Brings Band

Vincent Lopez and his orchestra will open an engagement in the Willows, Oakmont, Monday night.

Will Rogers Says

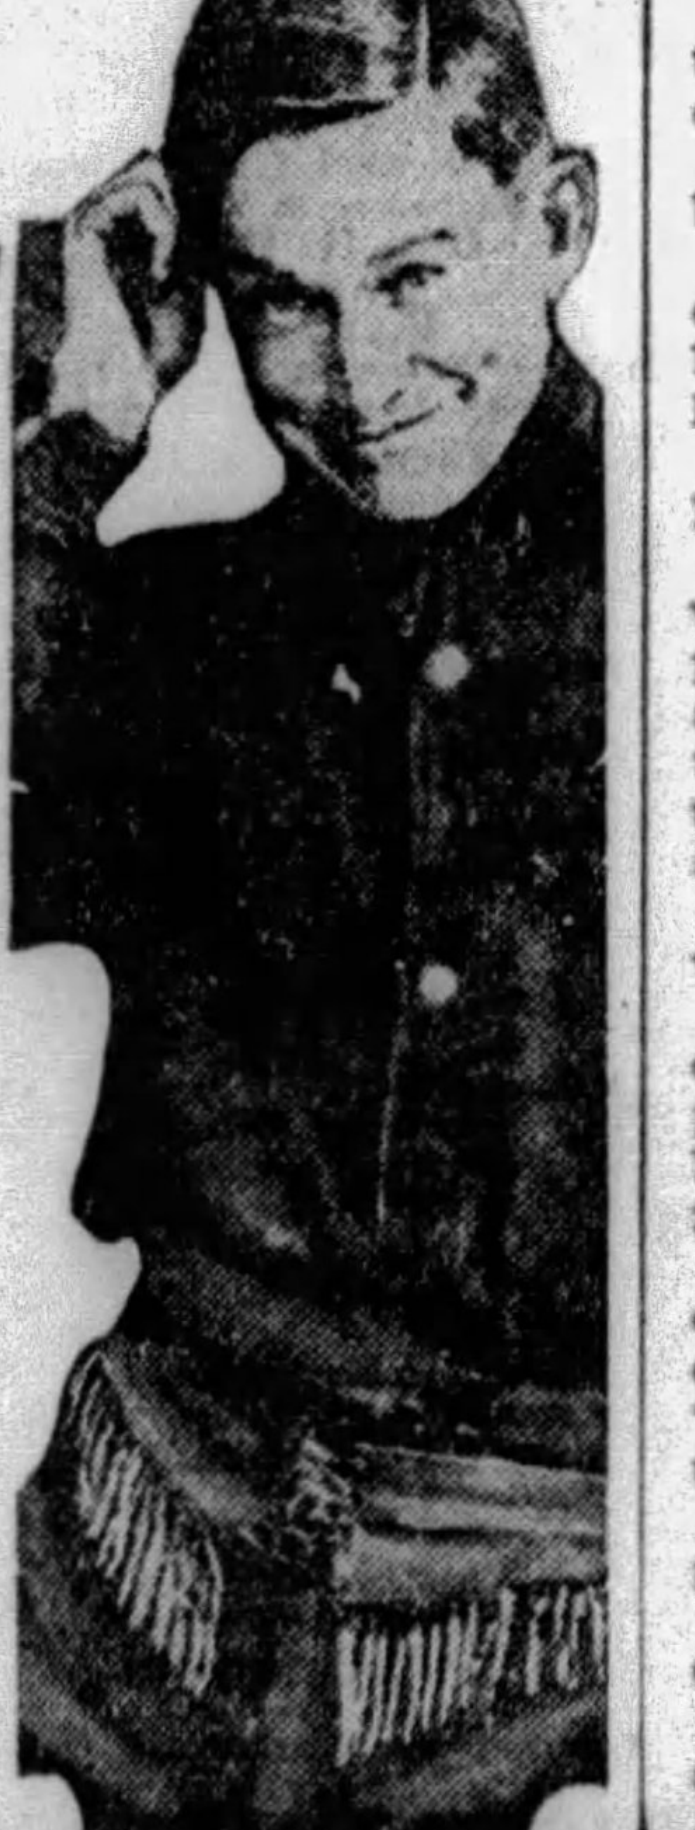
BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Aug. 31.

I thought they had the Jerusalem and Palestine thing pretty well settled as to whose it was. But it seems the Turks have broke out again.

Why don't the Jewish people recruit a lot of those East Side boys from New York and out in Chicago that fought so good in the war and send them over there?

A few regiments of those young boys would break those Mohammedans.

Yours, WILL.



Talk Debut

Sally Starr is now meeting the movie microphone for the first time during the filming of "Happy Days" at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios.

Kennywood Ends Carnival Tonight

Kennywood Park's first annual carnival week and Mardi Gras celebration will be brought to a close tonight with the final "Spectacle of the Skies," fireworks display, which has been a regular nightly feature. Music for dancing is furnished by Whitey Kaufman and his recording orchestra.

Walter Winchell On Broadway

BROADWAY NOVELETTE

> "He got a break, and went away to get a new start.
> (But poor kid). She never got a break, except the
> One way down deep in her heart."
> —From the song, "True Blue Lou."

SO WARBLES Hal Skelley about Nancy Carroll in "The Dance of Life" flicker, which is throbbing hearts at the Rivoli Theater on the Main Drag. This is the excellent cinema based on the Arthur Hopkins hit of last year, "Burlesque," in which Skelley and the adorable Barbara Stanwyck juggled with your tear ducts or brought the lump to your larnyx.

The leading characters in a genuine "Dance of Life" drama, however, are named Fred and Alicia, who are beter described as two of the many Broadway kids who are trying to out-smart show business.

Alicia and Fred went for each other in the big way last year in a Lew Fields' opera tagged "Present Arms!" in which Alicia presented legs that gave you the tremors. Then, after the show went limp, Fred connected with another piece that only lasted two months, but Alicia pounded the pavements trying to peddle her charms and talent as a terpsichorine to the casting officials, and many a day she refused to go home until, as she will tell you, she heard another "No!"

Yes, indeedy, if you haven't a pull with this Bobby Connolly or that dancing director, it's a long time between jobs.

* * *

FUNNY THAT WAY

AND so Fred and Alicia found themselves together quite a lot, comforting each other across an Automat counter or in a Times Square beanery where the food was filling and not too costly.

When you are constantly thrown into someone's company the attachment frequently becomes too strong to dismiss with the snap of a finger and as the long days grew longer, Alicia and Fred came to the verdict that it was real love. Then one day they vowed that unless both could connect with the same troupe, it would be less painful to go hungry together.

Women are funny that way. Like Alicia, they will spend their last dollar on a shirt, a tie, a pair of sox or underwear for their Man—because, well, because they are funny that way. And while she adored the Ronald Colmans and John Gilberts, she seldom saw them on the screens for the tariff is pretty stiff in those "Cathedrals." Anyhow, Alicia always had to wash out her pair of stockings to be presentable the next day, and if she didn't have Fred's linen to do, too, then there was the task of seeking a friend who was working so she could borrow some coffee and cake coin.

* * *

BIG BREAK COMES

THEN the big break arrived! They managed to impress the director of a Schwab and Mandel show, "Follow Thru," which was such a decided Broadway hit it spawned a series of road troupes. Fred and Alicia were promptly engaged for the ensembles that embellished the Boston company, and they perspired during the recent heat spells memorizing the intricate hoofing routines, perhaps the toughest dancing arrangements in any show in seasons.

When a week of strenuous work had been completed, Fred and Alicia were summoned into the director's office and the spokesman for the Messrs. Schwab and Mandel cleared his throat and said: "Are you kids in love with each other?"

"Why, yes," giggled Alicia, as she playfully pinched Fred's leg, "I guess that's what they are calling it these days."

"Well," frowned the director, as he fingered the corners of his desk, "It is tough for me to say what I have to tell you, but Schwab and Mandel do not permit love affairs in their shows—if they can help it. They usually cause no end of trouble later on and if one quits the other follows suit and matches like yours start arguments and so on. So we try to break them up. One of you will have to resign. I don't care which, but you must let me know by tomorrow."

After all those months! After all those months of ankling north, south, east and west on Broadway—the so-called Heart of the World.

Mr. Schwab fell in love with one of his "Good News" leading ladies, didn't he?

And they were married, too! And they are happy, aren't they?

Sure! It's swell for some people, when they have coin, prestige, yachts, cars and never have to eat in automats or exist in furnished rooms!

Nobody split that combination!
That was love. Real love!
Good old Broadway!

* * *

JUST A SWELL GUY?

THAT night Alicia, alone in her small, but immaculate room, could have given Alice Brady, Ethel Barrymore, Mrs. Fiske, Norma Shearer and Jeanne Eagels a lesson in hysterics. And if Fred was pained a little she never knew it, for he never showed that night. Just a swell guy.

So, after another good cry the next morning, Alicia went to the theater and encountered the director who had given his ultimatum the afternoon before.

"Well," he welled, "have you kids made up your minds?"

"Hasn't Fred said anything" she asked between lip quivers.

"No, not yet," was the reply; "he's out there rehearsing."

"Well, all right, then," almost choked Alicia, "please accept my resignation. Let Fred have the work; he's been laying off four months, you see, and it is so much easier for a girl to get a job."

The matter ended then and there, so far as the director was concerned. Alicia didn't say anything to him about her lay-off of six months! What the hell?

So now she has rejoined that huge army of Broadway lads and lassies who warm the benches in the chilly casting agencies and seek "Next Week," which usually means "Next Month," perhaps.

Maybe Fred will write often, huh?

Maybe Fred won't live so classy in Boston and remember the tough days they went through together, and maybe he will send back a five or 10 spot now and then?

Yeah, maybe!

It's been five weeks now!!!

* * *

GIRL FOR ZIEGFELD

AND so if Alicia won't be offended we hope when she sees this here that she will clip it and put it in her purse. And after she washes out that pair of hose, arranges her pretty hair as nicely as she knows how, and presses the pleats in her skirt, she should pull her hat down over her right eye in the sassy manner that becomes her, and go to see Stanley Sharp, Mr. Ziegfeld's right-hand man.

And Alicia should tell Mr. Sharp, or Mr. Zeke Colvin, or Alice Poole or Ziegfeld that we suggested her for the ensemble of "Ming Toy" or "Show Girl" or "Whoopee;" and that we hope very much that she gets the job.

And that if she does get it, to tell Mr. Ziegfeld we won't feel in the least obligated to him, but that Mr. Ziegfeld should call US up and thank US for doing HIM the FAVOR of finding girls who glorify HIM and his shows!

DAILY SHORT STORY

Whoopee at Grandma's

By N. FLORENCE LEECH

THE tall, light haired girl with amber colored eyes sat down with an impatient sigh in section No. 9 of the Richmond-Cincinnati Pullman.

"We're on our way, Madge," she observed to the brunet facing her.

Madge pulled off her tight blue hat. "Our way! Grandma's way, you mean! The train I'd like to be boarding goes east to Atlantic City, not west to Clifton!"

There was a brief silence, while each girl thought longingly of the abandoned vacation at Atlantic City, and sighed for the wasted moonlight, the dances and sailing parties. Almost at the last minute their mother had insisted that they accept Grandmother Barton's invitation, and spend their precious 10 days of freedom from office routine in Clifton, up in the mountains.

"Your grandmother is old, and she has set her heart on this family reunion," Mrs. Jones had insisted. "All the kinfolks will be there, and we will have a nice family party. I plan to go on Friday, but since you girls must work Saturday morning, you can take the noon train."

So unwillingly but dutifully Grace and Madge Jones were en route to the Barton family reunion.

"Uncle Thomas and his awful sons, Henry and Sam!" Madge presently exploded.

"Aunt Harriet and Aunt Em! Oh, it makes me sick!" Grace continued the dirge.

The train was about to start; its nervous puffing became rhythmic snorts. The last minute passengers were finding their seats. A slight jerk, and trees and houses began rushing past the windows.

"Let's get out our lunch," suggested Madge, in a hollow voice.

At that moment two young man hurried breathlessly down the narrow aisle, followed by the grinning porter.

"Gee, what a close shave," cried the taller of the two, as they dropped into section No. 8.

"Oh, boy, wouldn't step-mama be furious if we'd be late?"

Madge and Grace exchanged a quick glance, then pretended to be interested in the large box of lunch they were unwrapping.

"Gee, but I'm hungry," they heard.

The sandy haired young man was taking an apple out of a small paper bag. He dropped the fruit, and in stooping to regain it, dexterously struck it with his foot so that it rolled obediently across the aisle into Section No. 9.

"Oh," gasped Grace and Madge, with exaggerated surprise.

Hughey rose quickly. "Please excuse me!" He retrieved the apple. "It's all the lunch we have," he said sadly, and polished the fruit on his coat sleeve.

Again Grace and Madge exchanged glaces. "Why not?" challeged Grace's amber eyes. "Think of the boredom ahead of us."

"Okeh," answered Madge's sapping black ones.

"May we offer you a sandwich?" Grace asked demurely.

"Oh, boy," responded Ed. It seemed his conversational limit.

"I think introductions are in order," Madge suggested, as she made room for the young man.

"Smith is the name." Hughey spoke quickly. "Ed and Hughey Smith." Over a sandwich he grinned at his brother.

Grace laughed. This was the first time she had ever made a train acquaintance, but usually, she believed, fictitious names were in order.

"Our name," she informed the young man, "is Jones, Madge and Grace. We are sisters."

The boys exchanged knowing glances, and looked appraisingly but approving from blonde to flashing brunet.

"Delicious ham," declared Hughey, helping himself to another sandwich.

"Oh, boy," returned Ed, biting into a stuffed egg.

There was a 50-minute stop at Gorge, and the two couples, who were getting along famously, explored curiously the quaint winding streets, the tiny stores. There was a suppressed eagerness about the four of them, as though they were snatching at pleasure while it could be found, a storing up of laughter for grimmer hours. They swung aboard the train again at the last minute, and presently went into the diner for supper.

"How far are you going?" Hughey asked Grace.

"Cincinnati," she replied promptly, wishing to impress him.

"Too bad," spoke up Ed. "We were hoping we'd have your company all the way to St. Louis."

The train roared through the valleys, plunged through tunnels, swept around dangerous mountain curves. The joyous minutes seemed winged.

"I do hope they go to bed before we reach Clifton at 10," Grace whispered to Madge. But the boys, after a casual good night, presently strolled off to the smoker. The girls quickly collected their belongings, and were waiting in the vestibule when the train pulled into the dimly lighted station.

"And that," remarked Grace to Madge, as they climbed into Grandma Barton's decrepit flivver, "is that!"

Every window of Grandma Barton's ancient home sent golden welcoming beams into the night. "The Broadway Melody," via radio, sizzled through the cool mountain air, a crowd of laughing kinfolks surrounded Grace and Madge, and drew them into the house.

"Grandma had a surprise for us all," cried Mrs. Jones. "What do you think, girls, you've got a new uncle!"

"How come?" demanded Grace.

"He's mine," laughed Aunt Em. "I'm Mrs. Ralph Smith, now." Unceremoniously the long arms of the white haired old man enfolded the girl. "Such pretty young nieces," chuckled Mr. Smith.

"Now at last we can have supper," suggested stout Cousin Sam, above the tumult.

"But you said your boys were coming tonight," Grandma Barton turned to Aunt Em's new husband.

"They must have missed the train," he answered. "They're reckless young fellows."

The company began filing noisily into the dining room where loaded tables groaned beneath a country supper.

"Not so worse," Grace whispered to Madge, "but oh, think of the wasted moonlight!"

An automobile stopped out front, it horn tooting a greeting.

"Those boys!" Uncle Smith shouted. He opened the door, admitting a tall young man and a sandy haired companion.

"Grandma Barton," cried Aunt Em, "meet your now grandsons!"

Grace's hand found Madge's and clutched it tightly as introductions proceeded around the circle. "And these are Hannah's girls, Grace and Madge Jones," intoned Aunt Em. "My new sons, Hughey and Ed!"

"So glad to meet you," murmured Grace.

"Oh, boy," said Ed, dazedly.

Grace's eyes strayed for an instant to the moonlight drenched garden outside the window, then returned to Hughey's ardent ones.

"Oh, what a family reunion," she breathed, ecstatically.

"And oh, what a wonderful family," he answered, fervently.

"Supper," Sam was shouting, "is getting cold!"

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

by HAVEY J. BOYLE

VILLAGE GOSSIP: One of the pastimes of ball players on train rides is to soak Pullman towels in water, roll them into hard balls and wham them at a colleague who is not looking. . . . Jewell Ens, the other night, the night before he was to be appointed manager, by the way, was looking the wrong way and socko—he got a towel right on the back of his dome which almost knocked him cuckoo. . . . "I can lick the guy that threw that," said the enraged manager-to-be. . . . He looked into a crowd of 12 robust fellows when he said it, too, and by chance his glance rested on Fussell. . . . Now Fussell is a pitcher, whose contral late at night has not been so good, judging from a fine or so plastered on him this season, and Fussell, with that resignation which comes from previous punishment and injured innocence, said: "There are 12 guys here, but I know I'll be blamed for it." . . . As a manager now Ens will be immune from the wet towel socko act, for ball players, playful as they are, draw the line at whaming a towel at the boss. . . . This isn't baseball week for the column, or anything like that, but a few will be pleased to hear from Kiki Cuyler, the banished Pirate, who was kicked out of a Pittsburgh berth into a job where a fat raise awaited him. . . . His salary is reported to be close to $15,000 a year and he will get $5,000 or more in the coming world series, so he is not doing badly at all. . . . The feud between Cuyler and Donie Bush, of the year 1927, which led to Cuyler's banishment—or elevation—to the Cubs was lessened the other day in Pittsburgh when Bush, having just resigned, ran across Cuyler, and waved to him cheerfully. . . . Bush, by the way, will make good money wherever he lands. . . . He is a baseball broker, selling players from the minor to the big leagues. . . . His bank account already shows a nice row of figures from such dickerings. . . . Robert Garland, city councilman, father of daylight saving, in a letter assures Sidewalks there is no danger that pedestrians will be slapped into the jug for violating the red traffic lights. . . . The letter was in answer to a mild plea for this dispensation made in this column for pedestrians. . . . Mr. Garland's letter develops the fact that City Council through a Garland resolution frowned on the arrest of pedestrians and advocated education of jay-walkers. . . . Al Jolson, with another tear-wringer, is packing them in at the Grand. . . . At 6 o'clock, post meridian, the other evening, seats in the balcony, only, were available. . . . Mr. Jolson sings and cries and says "Beb-bee," (baby) in a way that has the lady customers reaching continually for their kerchiefs which are usually on the floor when not in use—along with the pocketbooks and hats. . . . Skin Young, a local artist, is doing well in a Cleveland house as a master of ceremonies, and while he hasn't reached the state of causing grandmothers to giggle and effervesce, there is a report that soon he will grace the stage of one of our local opera houses. . . . There is a girl-cashier in one of the movie ticket booths who actually smiles at a ticket-purchaser, refuting the old theory that ticket-sellers just hate to see anyone buy a ticket. . . . Some day the courtesy wave which has engulfed the ushers will spray the cashiers. . . . The downtown recently was visited by an enthusiastic parade of youngsters, ranging in age from 10 to 14, who were beating cans and carrying banners for one of the candidates running for office in the current campaign. . . . The cans they were beating happened to be cans that moonshine is delivered in, the boys in question being just a little thoughtless on the effect this might have on some of the customers they hoped to intrigue by their undoubted enthusiasm. . . . Incidentally, three of the headquarters are within the well-known stone's throw of one another, all three are equipped with loud speakers, and when three speakers begin broadcasting at one and the same time, the passer-by imagines trouble in China has broken out again with local repercussions on the part of natives resident here. . . . Bert Rodgers, of Knoxville, who is an officer on the Navy dirigible that flew over Pittsburgh, is a man of varied tastes, for before he became an officer on the dirigible he served on a submarine.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH'S SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Miss Sara Louise Gwinner Selects Attendants For Her Wedding

ON the very last day of August of 1929 we're all so busy planning for the first crisp fall days that we forget to squeeze out a tear in memory of departing summer.

We have bridal parties to hear about, and entertainments for the brides-to-be, and stag dinners for bridegrooms, too. And wedding presents to think about, and all the million and one exciting details that are associated with an important wedding.

* * *

FIRST of all today I want to tell you about Sara Louise Gwinner's bridal party. Of course you know she'll marry Frederick Eaton Crispin, son of the Clarence Gearhart Crispins, of New York, on Wednesday, September 18, and that she is the daughter of the Edward William Gwinners, of Fifth avenue.

Mrs. Frederick Gwinner III will be her matron of honor and Laurie Jenny Kloch, of Syracuse, N. Y., maid of honor. Bridesmaids will be Mrs. Gordon Fisher, Jr., Mrs. John Haynes Follansbee, Barbara Shiras and Eleanor Gillespie, of Orange, N. J.

Benjamin Eaton Crispin will be his brother's best man, and Frederick Gwinner III, Edward William Gwinner, Jr., James Oliver Flower, Gordon Fisher, Jr., John Easton, Jr., William W. Knapp, Jr., of Romulus, N. Y.; Roger Whitman of Garden City, L. I., and T. Felton Wimberly, of Birmingham, Ala., will be ushers.

And the Wednesday after Sara's wedding, September 25, Benjamin Crispin, her fiance's brother, and Laurie Kloch will be married in Syracuse. And Sara will then be one of Laurie's matrons of honor, and her fiance will be his brother's best man.

* * *

FALL brings betrothal news as well as weddings. And one of the most interesting announcements of the week comes from Charlottesville, Va. Mrs. James H. Hartman, from that southern city, announces the engagement of her daughter, Elizabeth, to William M. Day, of New York, son of Dr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Utley, of St. James street. The bride-to-be is a graduate of Miss Baldwin's School.

* * *

I'VE still another bridal party to tell you about. Rebekah Law Brown, daughter of the William Kennedy Browns, of Sewickley, who'll marry William Woodbridge Upham, son of the Nathaniel Janeway Uphams, of Duluth, Minn., and St. Petersburg, Fla., on September 14, has decided on her own attendants. Her sister, Mrs. Robert Colgan Schmertz, of Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Carl I. Hall, of Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, will be matrons of honor. And the ceremony will take place in the Browns' summer home at Carnot. Mr. Upham hasn't named his best man or ushers yet, I believe.

* * *

HAVE you heard that Nancy Scott Craig, daughter of the Mark Rodgers Craigs, of Sewickley, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Rodgers at Southampton, Long Island?

And that Mrs. Rodgers Blair and her daughter, Anne Blair, of Sewickley, left Friday to be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Brown, Jr., at their summer home at Rye Beach, N. H.?

* * *

MISS MARTHA HANLON, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew A. Hanlon, of Thomas boulevard, has chosen Tuesday, September 17, as the date for her marriage to James M. Daschbach, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert C. Daschbach, of Thornburg. The wedding will be solemnized at 9:30 in Holy Rosary Church.

* * *

THE marriage of Miss Dorothy June Barkin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Barkin, and Morris Milton Berger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Berger, of Braddock, took place Tuesday evening at the Hotel Schenley, the Rev. M. A. Sivitz officiating. Miss Anne E. Rothman sang. The bridal party included Mrs. Sarah Barsky as matron of honor; Miss Nettie Barkin, as maid of honor, little Dorothy Barsky, ring bearer, and Julius Rosenberg, as best man. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin with tulle veil which was arranged in turban effect and held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a shower of sweetheart roses, orchids and lilies of of the valley. Mrs. Barsky's gown was of white satin trimmed with pearls and crystal beads, and her bouquet was of American Beauty roses. Miss Barkin wore pink satin and tulle and carried Pernet roses. After the wedding feast and reception which supplemented it, Mr. and Mrs. Berger left for a motor trip at the completion of which they will live in Braddock. Both are graduates of the University of Pittsburgh, the bride being a member of Delta Phi Epsilon and Mr. Berger of Phi Beta Delta and Lambda Alpha Phi legal fraternity.

* * *

MISS MARGARET SIMPSON CARNES, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Neille Carnes, of Crafton, who has selected September 10 as the date for her marriage to Louis Emerson Voight, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Voight, will be honor guest at several affairs before her marriage. Last Friday Miss Josephine Barnard Gibson gave a shower for her; today Mrs. William G. Burkett is entertaining with a bridge luncheon in her home at Houston, Pa., and on Wednesday evening Mrs. Harry A. Dansey, of Dormont, will be hostess at a bridge musicale. Mrs. E. Cornell Emanuel will give a bridge party Friday evening, Mrs. Samuel B. Murphy, Jr., following with a similar affair on Saturday evening, and Miss Nancy Kenning Stotz giving a supper and bridge following the rehearsal on the wedding eve.

The ceremony will take place at 7:30 o'clock in the First Presbytrian Church of Crafton, the Rev. Dr. William J. Reid, pastor of the First United Presbyterian Church of Pittsburgh, officiating, assisted by the Rev. Dr. W. J. Dempster, of Crafton. Miss Carnes will be attended by Miss Stotz, as maid of honor, and Miss Gibson as bridesmaid. Mr. Emanuel, Willis D. Rinehart, Mr. Murphy, Harry O. Wertz, Mr. Dansey and Harry M. Brown will serve as ushers, while Robert L. Stevenson will be the best man.

UNSCRAMBLE THESE ANAGRAMBLES
DAILY ANAGRAM PUZZLES

TRY your hand at this fascinating game of Anagrambles—the game that is taking the town like the crossword puzzle craze took the whole nation for a ride through the dictionary.

The game is quite simple. Merely change the following words by the addition of the single letter indicated. Do not omit any letter of the original word. The letter may be inserted at the beginning of the word, anywhere within the word, or at the end. Thus, the word "pate," by the addition of the letter "l" becomes either "pleat" or "plate." The word "drag" may be changed to either "grade" or "raged" by the addition of the letter "e."

The original word must be changed in meaning by the commentary letter. To change "mine" by adding "d," to form "mined," would be incorrect. Rearrange the letters of your word to change its meaning, not its tense or number. Take a pencil now and write in your newly formed word in the spaces provided.

WOMEN'S CLUB HEARS GRAY

Protests against the dismissal of Township Manager Elijah Gray of Mt. Lebanon have involved club women and voters in the fashionable Washington road section of the South Hills.

Today the opponents of Gray are explaining that they did not ask the club women to work for their candidates for township commissioner who are seeking re-election. This followed a meeting of individual members of the Mt. Lebanon Women's Club at the home of Mrs. R. A. Daniell, 1020 Washington road, yesterday afternoon.

J. S. Hamilton presided at the meeting and Gray made a speech in which he recounted his service in Mt. Lebanon Township since 1921, during which it has developed from cow pastures and mud roads to the most rapidly-growing municipality in America. The women were incensed by a report, said to have been circulated by Gray's opponents, that the Mt. Lebanon Women's Club contemplated a house-to-house canvass in behalf of candidates for re-election to township commissioner. The candidates were said to have been responsible for th ousting of Gray.

The women said that the club would not become involved in political controversies and would engage in no electioneering. The action of individual club members, they declared, was a matter for each woman to decide.

Meditations of a Wife

By HELEN ROWLAND

Back to Sanity

SING Hallelujah, oh my Daughter! Sing hallelujah, and rejoice!

* * *

For, behold, the summer passeth, and with it shall disappear all the strange and fearful sights, wherewith the eyes of beauty-lovers have been smitten and their spirits afflicted.

* * *

Upon what weird visions have we been forced to gaze, in this, the summer of man's discontent and woman's folly!

* * *

HELEN ROWLAND

Verily, we have looked upon women, who sought desperately to emulate Mother Eve, in their desire to prove that they were vertebrate, and untrammeled by convention.

* * *

We have beheld men, who paraded through the market places and the highways, clad in pyjamas and in shorts, and in scanties, crying, "Down with the gods of fashion, and the tyranny of clothes! Down with Victorian modesty, which would rob us of our comfort and make us slaves to the collar button."

* * *

And though our spirits may have shuddered, yet have we smiled. For, not even a soldier in kilties is funnier than a six-foot man in short panties!

* * *

Behold, a man in white knickers and a sport shirt is a thing of grace and beauty. He delighteth the eyes of damsels. But the masculine knee and the masculine Adam's apple were never intended to be seen by woman!

* * *

Verily, a beautiful feminine knee may be pleasant to the sight, but a pair of sun-tanned thighs and a row of vertebrae displayed upon the beach are as unalluring as cold soup, and as disenchanting as garlic in the kiss.

* * *

Yes, a sun-kissed cheek may have its charms, but a peeling nose would make Venus herself, unkissable; and a red forehead would transform Cleopatra from a temptation into a joke.

* * *

A damsel in riding breeches may be piquant, but a damsel in TROUSERS is as a cartoon without a point. She is neither fish, flesh, nor honest woman.

* * *

Therefore, let us give thanks that these things, too, shall pass away. And that, with the coming of the autumn winds and the rising of the goose-flesh, sanity shall return; and men and women shall again appear clothed and in their right minds.

* * *

For poets may sing of "the female form, divine," but the female form, undraped, showeth more beefiness than divinity.

* * *

And man may have been made in the Image of the Lord, but without a collar he doth not LOOK it.

* * *

Verily, verily, clothes may not make the man—but they make him easier upon the eyes of woman? SELAH.

"COMING EVENTS---"

Drawn by Dorothy Flack

COMING events certainly cast their shadows—as far as Fall is concerned. In the very midst of Summer here we are pondering over the Fall styles.

Oh, dear! Sometimes it gets to be a bit of a bore, this constant round of fashions! No sooner does one get a most georgeous wardrobe ready for the Summer than Fall is here, with Winter following closely after. But what's a poor girl to do? In order to gain one's end one simply must keep up with the styles, and it gets to be a nuisance. Well, not exactly, because if one always looks one's best one is bound to stumble right on the very thing one has been seeking all along. And that's Romance!

And who ever heard of Romance coming to one if one is shabby and out of date? Of course, such things do happen occasionally, but, so far as I can find out, it's only in fairy tales and fiction.

So, on with the parade—let Fashion show her very best that we may select what is most becoming and most suited to our search for Love and Romance. Not that it really matters, but it does help. For Love, you know, seeks rather the heart than the fine clothes. They're simply bait! But they're fascinating bait, and who knows what may happen this Fall?

Old Age No Longer a Matter Of Years

NOT long ago I read an interesting letter from Henry Ford. He said if he could make his choice he would prefer to have all his employes between 35 and 69 years of age. "For then," he said, "we would have a stable and experienced force. We would not care how much over 60 the men were, so long as they could do their work."

DR. COPELAND

I'm glad to have this testimony to the value of the labor capable of being done by men past middle life. To my mind one of the most serious social problems relates to the place in industry of men and women past 50 years of age.

There are a great many persons of this age—and much older—actively engaged in the industrial world. But let a person past 50 get out of touch with his job and it is almost impossible to find employment.

I sometimes think my office in New York is a sort of employment bureau. My secretary there is constantly trying to find places for people out of work. So, if you have any spare jobs I wish you would let me know.

But what I started to say is that it is extremely difficult for one—man or woman—past 60, even though he be in good health and capable of doing hard work, to find an employer willing to give him a chance. There is no denying that age is a detriment to the job seeker.

It is pleasing to me to find Mr. Ford indorsing the usefulness of persons past middle life. What he says about their physical endurance harmonizes perfectly with my own views on the subject. For years I've observed that when it comes to a task involving loss of sleep, long hours of work and close attention to details, people past 40 will endure far more and carry on more successfully than will an equal number of persons below 30.

Mr. Ford says of the persons past 40: "Having lived a number of years is a great advantage to anyone if these years have wrought a background of experience. Is is usual to associate age with years only because so many men and women somewhere along in what is called middle age stop trying. They let themselves be old."

We must review our estimates of age and its significance. It is wicked to attach the idea of age to persons in middle life or past it. They are not old if they continue to think they are not, and we must help by regarding them as useful members of society.

Hot Weather Advice for Mothers of Babies.

IN hot weather diarrhoea is a common ailment of babies. It is the result of taking infected food or drink.

No mother should overlook the importance of this symptom. It may be the beginning of a serious illness. On this account it should be given immediate attention.

It is not uncommon to consider that teething is responsible for the diarrhoea. This is seldom the case. Some fault in the feeding is more likely to be responsible.

This trouble rarely attacks breast-fed babies. It is more common in bottle-fed infants.

We expect grown-ups to eat less food in hot weather. To overeat at this time is harmful. Likewise it is damaging to give the baby too much food. Diarrhoea is a common symptom of overfeeding.

To give the food too frequently or to give it at irregular intervals may be followed by a disturbance of the bowels. Stop the feedings at once and talk with your doctor.

Harry Is Puzzled When He Learns That Noel Is Still Away

HARRY UNDERWOOD'S eyes were apparently calm and steady as Princess Olina told him that she had called Noel without result before she had summoned us. But I saw a glint in them which told me that her news had much disturbed him.

"What did the people at his hotel tell you?" he asked quietly.

"That he had been away all the evening and had not yet returned," she answered, her eyes widening with alarm. "I told them to have him call me as soon as he got in, and they promised. Then I called you up. Oh!—you don't think—the same men have attacked him, too?"

"What nonsense!" Mr. Underwood exclaimed with a bluff heartiness that evidently satisfied Olina. But I, familiar with his tones, knew that his assurance covered a distinct anxiety. "He's just keeping late hours, that's all. You'll have to keep cases on him, I'm thinking. But he won't make any difference. I'll just have the troopers send a man out here. Now, please, listen to what I tell them, and don't add anything to my story if they should happen to ask you any questions, which I doubt, for I'll flag anything of the sort I can. Now for the tedephone. No—wait—let me think—just where would be the most likely place for that rat to watch for Georges to come in here?"

He stood still for a long minute, and I knew that he was going over the topography of the place. He knew it well from the watch he had kept upon it in the stirring days when, disguised as the "red-bearded man," he had thwarted the sinister plot against governments which had involved Olina.

"Yes," he said at last to himself, "that's the most likely place. wait here."

He addressed the command to both of us, turned away, and we saw his flashlight playing along the floor, picking out a path until it disappeared in the hall outside. We heard a door open and then Mr. Underwood's voice from the veranda outside.

"Listen, you rat! You're wasting your time around here. You've croaked the man you went after isn't that enough for you? And there's a dragnet out for you already that you'll have a sweet time getting through. You beat it away from here and don't waste any time trying to cut telephone wires, for I'm Johnny-on-the-spot till the state troopers get here, and that'll be mighty quick."

The door closed again, and in another minute we heard him at the telephone calling the office of the state troopers.

"This is The Larches," he said. "Yes—that big country place just outside Sag Harbor. There's been an attempt at burglary here tonight, but the dog kept them from getting in. The lady's nervous, however, and there's a reason why they probably will try their luck again before the night's over. Can you send a man over? I'll stay until you come. A half hour? Good work."

We heard him hang up the receiver, and then with the flashlight he picked his way back to the room in which we sat. He shut it off as he came into the light and smiled cheerily at us.

"Everything will be all right now," he said as he sat down. "I'll just stay here until the trooper comes, but I'll bet that lad I ragged is still running.

But Olina's eyes were filled with terror.

"You said—" she faltered.

"That he'd croaked the man he was after." Mr. Underwood returned cheerfully, "sure I told him that, and I'm sure my guardian angel will blot out the lie under the circumstances, considering the fact that usually I'm a strictly truthful man."

He gave an expressive wink as he spoke; and Olina smiled faintly.

"I might have known how it was," she said. "But I'm so upset. Won't you tell me just what happened?"

"Of course," Mr. Underwood replied promptly, but something in his tone told me that it was an abridged explanation which Princess Olina would receive.

Baked Apples With Marshmallows

Six apples, ¾ cup boiling water, 12 marshmallows, 1 tablespoon butter.

Wipe apples, remove core, cut through skin half way down to make points and place in baking dish. Reserve six marshmallows, cut remainder in pieces and put in center of apples. Put bits of butter on top of the marshmallows. Surround apples with water and bake in hot oven until soft, basting frequently. Be very careful that they do not lose their shape. Remove from oven, put a whole marshmallow in the top of each apple, and return to oven until slightly brown. Remove to serving dish, surround with the syrup from the pan and serve hot or cold with cream.

Cleans Sink

Methylated spirit used in the rinsing water when washing white silk will give it a finish like new. The spirit should be used in the proportion of one teaspoonful to a pint of water.

ERMINE AND SABLE MOST FAVORED BY LEADING DESIGNERS

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Aug. 30.—This era of bustle derives inspiration for its clothes from the bustle era. As the sartorial season advances, it is quite clear that the models are reminiscent of the age when life moved at an easier tempo, and a very snappy little frock could be put together with only eight yards of material.

* * *

AS we prophesied, fur-trimmed dresses have arrived, and you will see them on your side of the water when vacations are only a memory, and choosing autumn clothes is a delightful reality.

Many of the new models are fur trimmed, ermine and sable being first favorites. The "fluffy" long haired furs are apt to "weight" a dress, and so are used mostly for suits and wraps. But whenever fur is used, it is with discretion and taste, for a fur-trimmed frock can easily appear elaborate and overdone, and we are afraid it frequently does.

* * *

DESPITE the time of year, Paris is quite busy, many women being here to order their clothes before proceeding on a late vacation. The Ritz at luncheon time is always a fertile fashion field, and one is always certain of obtaining some indication of what will be worn, as well as what is being worn.

There is an air of prophecy about the very delightful ensemble seen at the Ritz last week. The three-quarter length coat is of mahogany milliner's velvet, and is lined with printed crepe matching the frock. A scarf which continues up over the shoulders from the revers is knotted at the back, and there is no collar.

* * *

THE other sketch depicts one of the latest models from Martial et Armand. The tight bodice has a collar of ermine with a knot and little tails at the back. The skirt is pleated at each side of the hips, flares with a bouffant crispness, and is considerably longer at the back. An enormous bow is placed low at the back.

Peter Pan Lines

The adoption of Peter Pan lines is remarked in several new Paris frocks that are not as youthfully styled as the necklines would suggest.

Peach Sauce

Printed Gown

Madame Munoz wore one of the most interesting dresses seen at a fashionable garden party in Paris. It was an Augustabernard gown printed in pen and ink resign.

Correct Manners

The Use of Letter Paper

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My friend and I were looking at some writing paper pads, and she remarked that the paper in a certain pad was too thin or transparent to allow writing on both sides. I said that I did not think it was proper to write on both sides of your paper., anyway, and she, being very annoyed, said, "I think that I should know, and it's quite proper unless you are writing an invitation or a manuscript.' I have always thought one should never use both sides of the paper. Will you please publish a reply in your column?

X. Y. Z.

EVEN though I don't admire the tart and unpleasant manner your friend took to uphold her point, I agree with her that I cannot see why we should not write on both sides of the paper, if we wish to. And she is correct, too, in excepting the two cases that she did. I agree with you that it does not look so well, when we are using single sheets, to see the writing on both sides, still it does seem a bit too strong to call this "improper." To my taste, the unattractiveness comes first in the use of single sheets for social correspondence. Single sheets usually look so business-like!

The Ideal Present for a Young Man

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am a young girl, 16 years old, and I will be 17 soon. I have been going about with a boy who will be 18 very soon. As I have been going about with him fairly steadily for the past six months, I feel as though I should give him a birthday present. I am still going to school. Will you please tell me what you would consider a suitable present for me to give him?

READER.

A BOOK, a well-chosen book—this is the ideal present for you to give to this young man. At your age it is extremely bad form for a girl to think in terms of any kind of present for a boy other than the impersonal present of small cost. And the well-bred boy will realize this. There are two classifications of books that are particularly appropriate for a boy—one that has to do with his hobby or hobbies, and the other a biography. And such a wealth of excellent biographies we have now! Every alert-minded boy wants to read them to see how other men have conducted their lives, what they have found valuable in life and what kind of "success" has interested them.

Slippers for the Bridesmaid

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I am going to be a bridesmaid and would like to know if it is proper to wear white slippers with a formal gown of a different color. The bridesmaids are not going to be dressed alike.

A. B. C.

FAR better and more effective for you to have your satin slippers dyed to match the color of your frock. White slippers destroy the unity and harmony of the costume.

After Sleepless Night, Tony Is Bothered With Fear Of Being Caught

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Sam Vettori, Chicago gang leader, outlines a holdup of the Casa Alvarado night club. Joe Massara, dude; Otero, The Greek; Tony Passa, ex-choir boy, and Rico, Sam's lieutenant, carry it out. In spite of Sam's warning against gunplay, Rico shoots a man when he reaches for his gun. It is Courtney, a captain of detectives. Back at Sam's place, Rico is berated. He retorts by threatening Vettori's leadership, calling him a coward. Supported by the gang, Rico is made leader and the hold-up cash is split among them. They hide as three detectives appear. Sam is questioned. Rico leaves his "split" with Ma Magdalena, fruit store owner. He buys a paper and reads the murder headlines.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER VIII.

TONY hadn't slept all night. He lay in the cold, dark room, sweating. The covers felt heavy as lead and from time to time he tossed them off, only to pull them over him again as the lake wind, streaming in the window, made him shiver. At intervals he would fall into a doze. Then he would see a windy street, feel a car skidding under him, feel a sickening jolt. He would wake with a start and sit up in bed.

"They'll get us for this," he kept repeating, "they'll get us sure."

Unable to control his imagination, he saw the high, forbidding walls of the State Prison, the tiny death cells with their heavily-grated windows; then in the prison yard, the gallows. He remembered what Rico had said about Red Gus, on the night of his execution: "Well, they're gonna put a necktie on Gus he won't take off!" Yeah, they sure put a necktie on Gus.

Tony smoked cigaret after cigaret. In his despair he cast about for someone to put the blame on. It was all Midge's fault. Wasn't she always after him to make more jack so she could put on the dog? Hadn't he tried to go straight and drive a taxi and make an honest living? Yeah, and hadn't Sam Vettori and Rico offered him money to quit his job and give them a lift on their stick-ups? Well, you couldn't quit a gang; once you were in, you were in.

Tony sat up in bed and looked out across the roofs outside his window. The sun was coming up and a cold, windy winter morning was dawning. Of a sudden he began to feel sick at his stomach. He lay down, but that didn't help him, then he tossed from side to side.

He heard his mother moving about in the next room. She was getting dressed to go to work. An alarm clock in a room across the court rang, then there was some loud swearing, and a window was slammed.

Tony had to vomit. He jumped out of bed and ran for the bathroom. When he came out his mother was lighting the stove. She acted as if she didn't see him. He went back to his room, but stopped in the doorway.

"Hello, mom," he said.

His mother paid no attention.

"Say," said Tony, "what's the matter?"

His mother turned and with her hands on her hips stared at him.

"Go back to bed, you loafer," she said, "I am sick of you. You are no good on earth. Just like your father."

"Aw, mom," said Tony.

"Don't try to salve me," said Tony's mother. "You go back to bed and get sober. You think I don't know nothing, don't you? Just like your father."

"I'm not drunk," said Tony, "I'm sick."

His mother turned her back and went on with her cooking. Tony went into his room, slammed the door, and got back into bed. A deadly depression settled on him. The world looked black.

He heard his mother go out, then he got up, dressed and made himself some toast and coffee. Anyway, he wanted his split.

On the way to Vettori's he met Father McConagha. The priest was a big man with a big, pale face. He walked with a rolling gait and there was something impressive about him. Tony took off his hat.

"Good morning, Antonio," said Father McConagha. "Where have you been, my boy? I haven't seen you for months."

"I been working," said Tony.

"What sort of work?" asked Father McConagha, putting his hand on Tony's shoulder.

"I been driving a taxi."

The priest nodded his head slowly.

"That is good work, Antonio."

Tony couldn't look at Father McConagha and kept twisting his hat in his hands and staring at it. Father McConagha talked to him for a minute or two about the rewards of honesty and the happiness to be derived from doing your work faithfully, then he said:

"Antonio, one day your father asked me to look out for you. Your father was a good man, but weak. Remember this, Antonio, if you are ever in any trouble I am the one to come to."

Tony flushed and said:

"Thank you, Father."

When Father McConagha had gone, Tony began to speculate. Did he know anything? Why, on this very morning, had he said something about being in trouble? Tony respected and admired Father McConagha. He felt that he could always turn to him.

Talking with the priest had made him feel stronger, but now that the priest had gone all the hopelessness of the night before rushed back on him. He took out a cigaret and lit it with shaking hands.

"They'll get us sure for this," he said.

Then once more he began to think about Red Gus and what Rico had said about him.

* * *

Seal Skin couldn't get Otero sober. She made him eat tomatoes and she gave him a cold bath, but nothing seemed to do him any good. He walked about the flat singing songs in Spanish dialect and bragging about what a great, brave man he was. Only one man in the world braver: Rico.

Seal Skin was dead for sleep, but she didn't shut her eyes for fear Otero would do some crazy thing like shooting out the window at the street light (he had done this one night).

Otero sat at the table with his automatic beside him, singing at the top of his voice:

"Look," he cried, "I am Ramon Otero, a great, brave man. I ain't afraid of nobody or nothing. I can drink any man in the world under the table and I can outshoot any man that walks on two legs. Only Rico; he is my friend. He is a great man like Pancho Villa and I love him with a great love. I would not shoot Rico if he shot me first. Rico is my friend and I love him with a great love."

Then he got up and, snapping his fingers, began to dance, stamping with his heels, wiggling his hips, till Seal Skin fell out of her chair laughing.

Toward morning he went to sleep with his head on the table. Seal Skin picked him up and carried him to his bed (he weighed about 115 pounds).

* * *

Rico bought all the papers he could find and went up to his room to read them. He sat at his table, his hat tilted over his eyes, with a pair of scissors in his hand, cutting from the papers all the articles dealing with the hold-up and the killing of Police Capt. Courtney. He arranged the clippings in a neat pile, then read them over and over.

One said:

. . .the thug who shot Police Capt. Courtney was a small, pale foreigner, probably an Italian. He was dressed in a natty overcoat and a light felt hat.

Another:

. . .Courtney's murderer was described by one eyewitness as a small, unhealthy-looking foreigner.

Rico tore up this clipping.

"Where do they get that unhealthy stuff!" he said. "I never been sick a day in my life."

Leota's Letter to Florence Causes Howdy to Lose Job in Bank

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Ann Marie Macy, though young and pretty, is the "easy mark" of her motherless family. She is forever waiting on her more modern, flapperish sisters, Alice and Jeanie, and lending them her clothes and trinkets to aid in their conquest of the boy friends. The money she earns by painting cards in her father's bookstore partly goes in payment of her brother, Howard's, debts. She is hoping to earn enough to pursue her art course. When Neal Forsythe arrives to visit the wealthy Lawlers Ann Marie quickly loses her heart to him in spite of her disillusionment when she finds him embracing Leota Ingram, the town's bad girl. Her dream of an art course is rudely shattered when Howard, her brother, tells her he is in trouble with Leota and asks Ann Marie to intervene. Leota unexpectedly appears at the Macy home as Florence and John Lawler call. To prevent a disastrous scene, Ann Marie quietly pays out her last money to Leota, who plans to leave for New York. It is the money saved for the art course.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XIV.

IT was no wonder that Ann Marie had the blues when she woke up the next morning.

All her little savings were gone, and she had a debt of $30 hanging over her head, besides!

Thanks to Howdy, she was facing the world without a penny to bless herself with, once more. And New York and art school were farther away from her than they had been a year ago!

She sighed as she got up and went into the cold bathroom for her shower.

The sharp sting of the water put life and pep into her. By the time she had brushed the wet waves of her hair and cleaned her teeth, she was almost her normal, happy self again. . . It is impossible to be blue for very long when you are young and pretty and in love with a man who isn't even engaged!

"And he isn't, thank fortune!" Ann Marie told herself as she pulled on her stockings. "He may be fickle and flirty, and he may drink too much. But I like him terribly, anyway—and somehow or other, I'm going to get to New York and see him pretty soon!"

A plan for making some quick money had begun to form in the clever brain under the brown-gold waves of Ann Marie's hair. A plan that made her hurry with her dressing that chilly morning, and sing as she hurried.

The big bone hairpin that she always wore was missing from her toilet table. So was her box of face powder.

She found them both on the top of the dresser in Alice's darkened bedroom. . .And beside them lay Ann Marie's one and only bit of valuable jewelry!

It was a large pendant—a big square aquamarine, surrounded by seed pearls—and it had belonged to Ann Marie's mother.

"Well, I'm fit to be tied!" the girl said under her breath, picking it up.

She turned and glared at Alice, who lay peacefully sleeping with a rubber bandage under her chin to keep it from drooping and her eyelids covered with some new salve that was positively guaranteed to grow thick eyelashes where none had grown before.

"Where can I put this thing so that Alice won't find it?" she asked Mrs. Leezy when she went down to the dining room for her toast and coffee. "She took it out of that hollow place in the newel-post and wore it last night—I don't mind her wearing it, but I'm afraid she'll lose it. I value it because it was my mother's."

Mrs. Leezy gave her familiar sniff. "And you should value it for the money it stands for!" she said sensibly. "You might want to raise money on it some day."

Ann Marie shook her head firmly. "Never!" she answered. "It's the only thing of hers that I own. I'd never get rid of it . . . I'd rather starve."

She took the pendant with her to the store, and put it away in the drawer of her little work table there.

At 10 her father arrived, still looking white and weak from his illness.

"You'd better go home now, girl," he said. "There's never much business on Monday. I'll get along fine."

Ann Marie put on her street clothes and went away.

But she did not go home.

Instead she turned west on Front street and walked to the outskirts of the town.

Beyond lay the flat countryside, brown and black under the pale winter sunshine.

A mile away, above the leafless tops of the trees, the red-shingled roof of the Country Club looked like a scarlet banner.

Ann Marie was a fast walker, and in a few minutes she was turning in at the gates and going up the drive.

Mr. MacGregor, the manager, was at his desk behind the cigar counter.

"Well, what can I do for you this fine morning, Miss Macy?" he asked when she came in. "Are you planning a little party?"

Ann Marie shook her head . . . It was very hard to come here begging, where she had always come as a guest.

"No, Mr. Mac," she said, flushed and uncomfortable, "I'm here to ask a favor . . . I want you to let me see the list of the people who are giving parties next month."

She saw that he was going to refuse her, and she hurried to tell him why she wanted them.

"You know, I often paint dinner cards and bridge score cards for Miss Lawler and some of the rest of my friends. And from now on I'm going to make a regular business of it. . . So I thought that if you'd give me the names of people who might want cards, I'd give you a dollar for every order I got from them."

Ah, that was different. . . Mr. MacGregor's face brightened at once. He reached for the topdrawer of his desk and handed her a small pad. On it were all the names that she wanted.

She copied them down: "Mrs. Lawler, 12 guests for Valentine Day at lunch; Mrs. Reginald MacKinnen, 10 guests for dinner on the sixth—" and so on. There were 11 names on the list.

"Thank you so much!" Ann Marie's voice and eyes were full of gratitude as she handed the pad back to him. "You've been very kind to me Mr. Mac!"

On the long walk home she made the rest of her plans.

She would phone all of the women on the list and ask them to let her make the favors and cards for their parties. . .and perhaps she would get some orders for hand-painted fans and scarfs, too.

Fairly radiant with enthusiasm and eagerness, she flew into the old brown house and up to her own room.

"Here's where I really start to work!" she told herself as she cleared off her work table and got into her old, paint-smeared frock. "Here's where I start to make some real money!"

She called the Lawlers' home first of all and asked for Mrs. Lawler.

"Just a moment, please," said the man-servant who answered her.

But it was two or three minutes before he came back to the telephone.

"Mrs. Lawler cannot speak to you, Miss Macy," he said, and puzzled, Ann Marie slowly hung up the receiver.

Now, what did that mean? . . . Did it mean that Mrs. Lawler was angry with her for some reason or other? . . . Or was she just busy?

Ann Marie was still wondering when the front door of the house burst open, and Howdy came in.

"What's the matter?" Ann Marie asked him in amazement, for he never came home in the middle of the day. "Sick?"

He shook his head. "Worse than that," he said. "The worst thing that could happen to me has happened! —Earthquake, floods and fire! —I've lost my job!"

He "wopsed" down on the hall seat, his hands deep in his pockets, his eyes on the floor.

"Before Leota left town last night," he began his story, "she must have mailed a letter about me to Florence. I guess she didn't leave anything unsaid in it—and a while ago Florence's mother showed up at the bank. Then Mr. Lawler sent for me, and the two of them told me what they think of me. . . . So I'm—out!"

Ann Marie groaned. "But I gave Leota $130!" she cried. "And I promised her more!—Oh, she should not have sent that letter, Howdy, when I'd been so decent to her. I treated her just as nicely as I could—"

"Yeah, you did everything but the one thing you should have done!" he said brutally. "If you'd used your brains you'd have made her sign a paper promising never to raise a finger against me!"

Ann Marie began to cry. "How did I know what to do?" she sobbed. "I did my best—you know I did Howdy."

He nodded. "Yeah, I suppose you did. No use to cry over it, anyway," he said, and stood up. "The thing that's worrying me now is how to get some money. There's nothing big enough for me in this town. I'm going to clear out just as soon as I can raise the kale for my railroad ticket."

The tears streamed down Ann Marie's face and her heart swelled. . .He was going away, her brother.

"Can't you stay here and work for dad?" she asked in a whisper, but she knew that he would never work in the little shop. He had always laughed at it.

"I'm going out to a town in Oklahoma where they're starting a new bank," he said. "I won't tell you just where it is, for I'm not going to take any chances on Leota's following me out there. Ann Marie, you've got to get some money out of dad for me."

Ann Marie nodded. . .Into her brain came the thought of her mother's pendant, lying in a corner of the drawer of her work table at the store.

"You might want to raise money on it some day," Mrs. Leezy had said of it that morning.

Evidently that day had come!

PITTSBURGH'S FAVORITES ON RADIO BILL TONIGHT

Sousa and Wagner Works Chosen for Broadcast

COMPOSITIONS from among the favorite selections of S. F. Heckert, president of the National Fireproofing Company of Pittsburgh, will be played during the Babson Finance Period tonight. This program will come through WJAS at 8:30 o'clock.

Compositions from the pens of Sousa and Wagner were among those requested by Mr. Heckert, and examples of the works of those two great musicians will be heard during the broadcast. A short talk on finance will be given by a member of the Babson organization during the broadcast.

Another program of interest during the evening will be that of the Marvin Musicians. The Marvin group is a newcomer in the radio realm. They are under the direction of Hugo Mariani and they will celebrate the beauties of the provinces of Italy in an all-Italian program. This program will go on the air over KDKA at 8:30 o'clock. Dolores Cassinelli, soprano, is the featured artist for the inaugural program.

A program of modern classics will be broadcast during the General Electric Hour through WCAE at 9 o'clock. Debussy's "Danse," in the arrangement of Ravel, and Honegger's thrilling musical picture of a locomotive, "Pacific 231," are the French and Spanish modern compositions to be featured in the program.

We Now Present

What would KDKA do without Wilkinsburg? Just how important that community is to the pioneer broadcasting station may be learned from the fact that no less than 14 members of its staff have their homes there. The latest resident from that town to become affiliated with the staff is Miss Elizabeth Eisley, who has been made a member of the secretarial force.

The antenna poles of station KDKA on the hill above East Pittsburgh have taken on a stick candy appearance as the result of ever-increasing air traffic. In order to make them easily visible to passing planes they have been painted black and chrome yellow in stripes. This is the standard color and design recommended by the Department of Commerce. All Westinghouse radio antenna poles will be subjected to this treatment in the future, according to Walter C. Evans, superintendent of radio operations.

Feminine fans of Rudy Vallee will listen in vain for his crooning voice. He played and sang his farewell program last Saturday night, before leaving for Hollywood with his band. He doesn't plan on staying very long, his girl friends may like to know.

The latest gift to Milton Cross, NBC announcer, from his followers beyond the microphone deserves mention. It was received from Devonshire, England — a Chinese lacquer box filled with French bon-bons.

R. P. Griffith, market editor of KDKA, who had been vacationing during the last two weeks, has returned home. He will again take his place before the microphone Tuesday.

RESERVE CASH MART POWER REDUCED

New Banking Tendencies Weaken Federal Board's Control of Brokers' Loans

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—Numerous new tendencies in banking weaken the control of the Federal Reserve authorities over the money market.

Of these perhaps the most important is the development of bootleg, or outlaw, banking, which consists of the making of loans to brokers by non-banking sources. Conspicuous among these lenders are business corporations, wealthy individuals, investment trusts and trustees. Having accumulated large profits and having raised surplus funds through the sale of new issues of stock, corporations have become substantial lenders, taking over a banking function. Although some of the leading companies, including United States Steel, General Motors, National Biscuit, American Telephone and Telegraph Company and American Radiator, abstain from lending to brokers as a matter of principle, at least 194 leading corporations regularly make brokers' loans.

These bootleg lenders are outside the scope of banking regulation, and as Federal Reserve policy tends to hold down bank loans to brokers "others" step in to fill the gap and to reap the benefit of abnormally high interest rates. According to the 1928 balance sheets examined by the Standard Statistics Company, 194 out of 1,000 corporations studied were making brokers' loans which totaled $700,000,000.

COMPETITION WITH BANKS

Alluding to the performance of this banking function by non-banking lenders, H. G. Parker, statistician, points out in the organ of the American Bankers Association: "We are forced to the conclusion that these large cash surpluses, built up not only through surplus earnings but through the sale of securities, will keep the financial officers of corporations in competition with the banks for all forms of liquid investment for some time. Whether they will continue to invest largely through the medium of brokers' loans will, we believe, depend almost entirely upon the relative rates for the various types of investment which appeal to the corporations.

"As long as American business continues to be as prosperous as it is today, competition along these lines seems bound to grow. A generally lower level of security price or a business depression—both of which would come together—would not only lessen the competition but probably force some corporations to again become borrowers rather than lenders or investors. But, there is nothing on the business horizon today to justify the belief that we are approaching this latter stage."

Another threat to the authority of the Federal Reserve is the bank merger movement. The enlarged resources of combined institutions gives them such strength that they are relatively less dependent on the aid of the central banking system.

Willard L. Throp, economist at Amherst College, in referring to this trend, pointed out:

"Underlying the establishment of the Federal Reserve system in 1913 was the belief that, with some 30,000 banks in the country, an agency was needed to centralize banking policy. It should act for the general welfare in business and industry rather than for its own gain, and it presumably was created with power to enforce its decisions. But the children who were so easily chaperoned at first have grown rapidly. The banks of the country have decreased in number and increased in resources. And the chaperone has been demonstrated not to be all-powerful. Its policies have been questioned and its ability to enforce them challenged. The continual growth of banking institutions increases the embarrassment of the board. Its position promises to become more and more difficult, particularly when it may chance to differ in policy with bankers whose individual salaries exceed those of the entire Federal Reserve Board, and with banks which are able to carry on their transactions without Federal Reserve aid."

HELPS SMALL BANKS

On the other hand, William McC. Martin, governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis, feels that the Federal Reserve system assures the small unit bank of an opportunity to compete with branch banks.

"The small unit bank," he remarked, "if a member of the Federal Reserve system, has a connection which will enable it to do business in competition with any branch bank of a greater merger. Of course, its smaller capital will place a smaller limit on the loans it can make to any one individual, firm or corporation, but with this exception it would seem that it should be able to render any service to its community that the branch bank can. In fact, the existence of the Federal Reserve system guarantees to the small unit bank that it can exist. Its connection with the Federal Reserve Bank gives the small bank nation-wide facilities.

"In the old days banks in the smaller cities were absolutely dependent on their correspondents, but the correspondents always did everything in their power to cooperate. The trouble was that the time would come when the correspondent in order to save itself would not take care of other banks. This was the case in 1907. Now through the Federal Reserve system both the smaller banks and the correspondent banks are made more effective."

Baldwin's Tax Refund Is Equal to $4.76 A Share

THE Treasury's award of $3,765,598 in refunds for over-assessments of income and profit taxes for the year's 1912-1926 to the Baldwin Locomotive Works and Standard Steel Works means $4.76 a share on the 800,000 shares of new stock outstanding, it was pointed out. This readjustment comes at a time when the railroad equipment business shows signs of an impressive recovery and should prove beneficial to the company's earnings.

Friday markets have been interesting in recent weeks for those not too heavily short or long, as the case may have been. The smash of August 9, following the rise in the rediscount rate to 6 per cent, caught many by surprise, but the following week prices soared on Friday. A week ago many astute traders anticipated a reaction in response to the jump of more than $130,000,000 in loans, but those who sold short on this theory were severely burned. Another rise of more than $130,000,000 in loans this week appeared to have no effect on prices until along toward yesterday noon, when, instead of declining, stocks again began an upward flight.

ALTHOUGH the rubber shares as a group have done little marketwise for some time past, Goodyear Tire and Rubber has been an exception. Possibilities in this branch of company's business is believed to be unlimited. Aside from this pose in close touch with management point out that Goodyear will earn around $12 a common share in 1929. This is well in excess of the common dividend requirement. Heavy consumption season for rubber footwear will soon be at hand and this division long has been an important revenue producer for Goodyear.

Wholesale and retail gasoline price cuts were announced by leading companies. It is pointed out that despite restrictive methods and attempts at curtailing output, there is still an overproduction of crude oil which has been translated by the refiners into an overproduction of gasoline. "The Lamp," official organ of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, emphasizes once again the fact that increased demand for petroleum products appears the only solution. Oil shares digested the price cuts in a manner satisfactory to those who have been prominent in the recent upswing in these shares.

UTILITY companies appear destined to receive considerable attention from federal and state law makers during the coming months. From Washington comes word that Senator Couzens will ask an investigation of the Federal Power Commission. In New York, Gov. Roosevelt demands immediate lowering of utility rates and a uniform distribution of cost of electric current. Contemplated mergers will also probably come in for probing.

In well informed railroad circles it is believed control of Delaware, Lackawanna and Western lies in the open market. For this reason stock is said to contain interesting speculative possibilities. Earnings are running at a high figure and this added to the fact that competitive bidding for control might be had will naturally cause market observers to watch its movements. A group holding a large block of the stock would have to be accorded recognition in connection with consolidation developments.

UNION OIL SETS NEW OUTPUT RECORDS

Export Business Is Factor In Piling Up Big Gains In Current Earnings

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 31.—That Union Oil of California is due to report one of its best third quarters in recent years is seen from survey of company's current position, both from a production and financial standpoint.

Present production of the company, including shut-in barrelage, totals approximately 100,000 barrels, of which 67,000 barrels are derived from Santa Fe Springs, where the company has 48 wells producing. In this field Union has 46 wells drilling, completions of which are made regularly. With completions from the Santa Fe Springs field and drilling projects under way in a majority of the fields in California, Union's daily production should be steadily increased despite gradual decline of some of the flush-production wells.

One of the most important arms of the company, which has been somewhat overlooked, is the exportation of oil and by-products to Australia, New Zealand and the Asiatic countries. Under an agreement entered into last year with the Atlantic Refinery Company, Union has established distribution, bulk stations and offices in the above countries, which enables it to make a vigorous bid for business in competition with English firms.

PROSPEROUS PERIOD

It is pointed out by those close to the situation that through continued stability in oil prices, increased gasoline demand in the third quarter and expansion of the company's cargo business, Union is enjoying a period of prosperity equal to any period in the company's history.

When it is realized that net earnings for the six months ended June 30, 1929, equaled $1.73 a share on the 4,060,000 shares of capital stock outstanding, despite an unfavorable gas price war in the first quarter of the year, there is every likelihood that this will be exceeded substantially in the last six months of 1929. Earnings for the third quarter, ended September 30, should run close to $1.27 per share, giving a return for the nine months ended as of that date of $3 per share on the capital stock. It is a well-known fact that Union charged off to depreciation and depletion in the first six months a sufficient amount for the entire year, thus obviating the necessity of heavy charge-offs in the third and fourth quarters.

In the first six months of 1919, Union was the recipient of an amount from the United States Government covering Federal taxes to December 31, 1924. The amount was disbursed to the company by the Federal Government after settlement on previous overtaxes had been reached. Reserves provided therefor out of former years' profit leave a balance in excess of possible requirements for the years from 1925 to 1929, inclusive, so that no provision for the 1929 Federal taxes will be necessary out of the 1929 income.

PETROLEUM EXPORTS

Petroleum off-shore shipments in California have been making record highs this year over all previous years and, according to Paul Boggs, vice president, Union Oil Company of California should continue to do so until the end of the year. Off-shore shipments of gasoline, kerosene and other petroleum products to Europe, Australia and the Orient, South American ports and Atlantic seaboard, should aggregate 325,000,000 gallons for the year, of which it is anticipated the gasoline shipments alone will total 230,000,000 gallons. This is an increase of about 40 per cent over the previous year.

Due to improved condition within the industry and the prospects for further improvement during the balance of the year, it is expected that sales of Union for 1929 should aggregate or exceed $100,000,000, the report continued.

Increased off-shore shipments is attributed to success with which California refineries have been able to prove that, in actual tests, their products are superior to those in other sections of the country. So rapidly is California gasoline gaining favor in European markets as well as in the Atlantic coast territory that this demand is almost equivalent to the home consumption at present time.

Stock Split-Up Planned by Warren

BOSTON, Aug. 31.—Question of splitting the stock of Warren Brothers Company has been given more or less informal consideration by the management. Opinion within the board is not unanimous on the advisability of the step at this time, however, but it is felt that a split-up of the stock is not far off.

Earnings after all charges except taxes for the six months ended June 30 were $1,368,000, or $8.23 a share on the common, compared with $527,000 net before taxes in the same period last year. This represents an increase of nearly 160 per cent, but in the first half of 1928 Cuba was not a strong contributor to net income as was the case in the initial six months of 1929. Cuban profits for the second half of this year likewise will be substantial, although the rains usual during this season will exert some restraining effect on paving operations.

CALIFORNIA OIL DECLINE

Leading California oil producing interests expect a substantial decline in the state's oil yield in the next 90 days, both through the operation of the new state gas conservation law and the natural decline in Santa Fe Springs field.

Estimates are to a large degree tentative, yet they are made by producing departments of several major companies. These look for a drop of about 100,000 barrels daily in the state by October 1 with a further drop of that amount in the following 30 days and a total decline of 250,000 barrels probable by December 1.

New completions of deep sand wells in Santa Fe Springs, the largest producing area in California, have not been sufficient to offset natural decline in yield of older wells recently. This pool on August 20 produced 306,556 barrels, while a week later, August 27, yield was off 22,000 barrels to 284,821 barrels.

Completion of new large flowing wells causes wide fluctuations in daily yield from time to time, but consensus is that the Santa Fe deep yield is "over the hill." One producing authority looks for a rapid and substantial decline in Santa Fe the next 30 to 60 days, with or without conservation, due to the peak being off the field.

While there are admitted difficulties in putting the new gas conservation law into a smoothly running machine immediately, mainly because of lack of familiarity in carrying out the set of regulations prepared by state authorities, California authorities feel that the program is in strong hands and will be carried out. Large companies are fostering its operation and expect that as early as September 15 a material decline will be effected in the state's yield.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—Bullish cables gave confidence to grain buyers today. Prices were pushed up from the beginning. Trading was quiet but a firm undertone prevailed in all grains, wheat starting ⅝ to 1½ cents higher and extending its gain to 2 cents in the first hour of the session. Corn was unchanged to ⅞ cent higher at the opening, while oats were a shade to ⅞ cent higher. Provisions mixed, lard 2 cents higher to 5 cents lower and other provisions 12 to 35 cents lower.

AT. COAST LINE DIVIDEND OUTLOOK

Payments on Common Stock Considered Safe Despite Drop in Gross Revenue

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—Despite a drop in net operating income from $168,525 for July last year, to $16,734 for last month, Atlantic Coast Line reports for the 7-month period an increase in the same item amounting to $3,827,000 over the corresponding period last year.

Net operating income for the first seven months of the current year amounted to $10,433,000 against $6,606,000 last year and $8,473,000 in 1927.

The gross revenues for last month were $4,585,000 as compared with $7,754,000 last year and $5,323,000 in 1928. Generally the drop in gross by Atlantic Coast Line reflects a condition in southeastern territory that is shown in other lines serving that territory. While other sections of the country have enjoyed a period of comparative improvement in the last year, the South, and in particular the Southeast, has not been so fortunate.

MANY ADVERSE FACTORS

Labor troubles, a falling off in crops, decreased purchasing power of inhabitants and continued adjustment as a result of the collapse of the Florida boom in 1926 are all factors that have contributed to the showing of rail carriers in that section during the past seven months. Of course, Atlantic Coast Line is no exception although able management and close control over expenditures have aided in preventing a worse showing.

These last named features have contributed more than any other elements to the preservation of the 7 per cent dividends on the common from rail operations. The usual 5 per cent on the preferred of course is safe. The customary 3 per cent extra out of non-operating income does not appear in any immediate danger although Louisville and Nashville, in which Atlantic Coast Line owns about 51 per cent of the outstanding stock, seems to be suffering to a less extent from the same influences. The former road in turn owns 72 per cent of the outstanding stock of Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis. Despite a drop in the gross revenues, Atlantic Coast Line has been able to show an increase in the net income.

PROPERTY KEPT UP

Since 1926 the property investment of Atlantic Coast Line has shown some decrease although the amount expended has been sufficient to keep the roadbed and equipment in first class condition. The ratio of the principal subdivisions of operating expenses to operating revenues last year were as follows: transportation, 35.6 per cent; maintenance, 20.7 per cent; maintenance of way and structures, 15.3 per cent.

Atlantic Coast Line, generally in view of the high grade nature of its property and conservative financing, has developed to a degree where a considerable increase in business may be handled without a corresponding increase in operating expenses. The likely improvement of conditions now existing in its territory as well as the prospects of further development will furnish an increasing amount of traffic to Atlantic Coast Line.

Equipment Orders Reported Increased

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—The Columbia and Greenville Railroad has purchased 300 box cars from the American Car and Foundry Company.

The Brooklyn and Queens Transit Corporation has ordered 50 surface cars from Osgood Bradley Company and a like number from J. G. Brill & Co., as well as 100 sets of trucks from J. G. Brill.

Recent Operating Economies Make Record Possible In Sales and Earnings

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—Operations of International Silver Company in the current year have been on a more favorable basis than in previous years and indications are that new records on sales and earnings may be established.

The previous record on sales was made in 1926 with $20,351,446, while on earnings the best showing was attained in 1927 of $1,857,854, after all charges, including depreciation and federal taxes.

In the first half the company reported net income of $652,442 after all charges, including depreciation and federal taxes, the best for any similar period in its history. This was an increase of 37 per cent over the $476,130 for the corresponding six months of 1928, and compared with $640,027, the previous record, in the first half of 1927. After allowing for preferred dividends, net this year was equal to $4.84 a share on 91,200 shares of $100 par common outstanding and compared with $2.90 in the corresponding half of 1928.

INCOME RATIO UP

An improvement in the ratio of operating costs to sales has been apparent in recent years, although the best showing in this respect was made in 1927. On sales of $19,840,968 in latter year, there was operating income of $2,912,848, before depreciation and interest, or 15.1 per cent of sales, while last year operating income represented 12.4 per cent of sales. In the three previous years the ratio varied from 9 per cent to 11.5 per cent.

Further economies in operating costs are expected to result from the ultimate coordination of manufacturing facilities and elimination of duplications. At present the company has 13 plants in six cities in Connecticut and it is likely that production of some of these may be transferred to others, making for greater concentration of output. In addition the company has a plant in Florence, Mass., and three plants in Canada.

Except for 1925, International Silver has demonstrated a good income record over the past five years. Average annual income during this period has been $1,192,000 or the equivalent of better than $8.40 a share on the present outstanding common of 91,200 shares, after allowing for preferred dividend requirements.

WORKING CAPITAL HIGH

Although the company's liquid financial status showed a minor impairment at the end of 1928 compared with a year previously—current assets to current liabilities in the ratio of 13.6 to 1 against 18.0 to 1—working capital was increased by $1,700,000 to $15,004,419, the largest in the company's history. It compared with $13,303,137 at the close of 1927 and $12,847,150 on December 31, 1926.

Cash amounted to $1,328,246 on December 31, last, a slight decrease from a year previously. Investments in stocks and bonds, however, were increased materially in 1928, totaling $2,874,067 and reflecting the utilization of part of the proceeds from the sale of additional common stock to holders in March, 1928. At that time 30,399 shares were offered in the ratio of one new share for each two held at $110 a share, bringing in about $3,300,000 of new capital.

Funds of about $2,400,000 were used to retire the company's bonded debt so that capital structure now comprises 60,285 shares of preferred stock of $100 par and 91,200 shares of $100 par common.

SURPLUS INCREASED

Inventories totaled $6,414,780 at the end of 1928 and were slightly smaller than on December 31, 1927. Bank borrowings of $400,000 were disclosed on December 31, last, although there was no such indebtedness a year earlier. Surplus totaled $6,045,180 and was increased by $820,000.

International Silver is the largest manufacturer of silverware in the world. It owns the entire capital stock, except a few directors' qualifying shares, of International Silver Company of Canada, Ltd. Latter earned $80,451 in 1928, the equivalent of almost $1 a share on International Silver's outstanding common.

Investment in the Canadian company is carried at $1,306,846 and income of $80,451 in 1928 represents a return on the book value of slightly better than 6 per cent.

International Silver originally represented a consolidation of 13 silverware manufacturing companies, including Holmes & Edwards Silver Company, Rogers & Brother, William Rogers Manufacturing Company, Rogers Cutlery Company, Wilcox Silver Plate Company and Meridan Silver Plate Company. Subsequently there were added Derby Silver Company and United States Silver Corporation as well as three others.

Markets Closed To Observe Holiday

The Pittsburgh Stock Exchange remained closed today in observance of the triple holiday declared by the board of directors. The exchange will reopen on Tuesday morning.

Many other exchanges throughout the country have adopted the plan and remained closed today. Among them were New York Stock Exchange, the New York Curb Exchange, the New York Produce Market, the Buffalo Stock Exchange, the Philadelphia Stock Exchange, the Los Angeles Stock Exchange, the Boston Exchange and the San Francisco Exchange.

The Chicago Stock Exchange decided to follow the example of the markets in other cities, but the Board of Trade remained open today as did the New York Cotton Exchange.

CENTRAL ALLOY OFFERS NEW STEEL

Stainless Product Expected To Find Vast Market in Automotive Industry

CLEVELAND, Aug. 31.—General adoption of the new Krupp stainless steel by automobile manufacturers is the hope of members of the Krupp-Nirosta group who produce the steel in this country.

Central Alloy Steel Corporation, which shares the patents on this steel with Ludlum and Crucible, would benefit especially from such a move due to the company's long experience as a producer of special steels for motor cars and from its efforts to secure quantity production on stainless.

Central is perfecting special processing equipment designed to allow the production of stainless steel in a quantity sufficient for automobile demands and at an attractive price. Such a process is expected to have far reaching effects in the affairs of the company.

The Krupp stainless steel, which is marketed in this country under the name of Enduro-Nirosta, has several qualities making it valuable for exposed polished parts, with consequently many uses in the automotive industry. It is non-rusting and impervious to atmospheric attack when polished.

PROPERTIES OF ALLOY

Stainless readily adopts a mirror finish that remains permanent since there is nothing to wear thin or flake off and is more resistant to a wider range of corrosive media than any other alloy. At the same time, except for its limited production, it renders no manufacturing difficulties. It is produced in all standard forms, including seamless tubing, and in addition it can be deep drawn, spun, machined and welded.

The automobile industry already is using Enduro-Nirosta for smaller parts, such as hood hinges, body trim, lamp rims and radiator, gas tank and hub caps. As a result of its success on these parts several large manufacturers have signified their intention to use it for all exposed parts as soon as it can be obtained in sufficient quantities.

The effect of such business may be determined from the fact that a single large maker of popular priced motor cars, in considering the adoption of the steel, estimates an annual requirement of around 60,000 tons. With this prospective tonnage as a basis, interests close to Central Alloy predict a market of close to 100,000 tons annually in the automobile industry. Although the automobile industry may be the largest single outlet it is only one of several industries where the metal may be adopted.

QUANTITY PRODUCTION

With Central's new manufacturing process and the quantity production the price will be substantially reduced, making it even more attractive to the consumers. Whereas Enduro now sells for around $800 a ton on the average it is expected the price may be brought within the neighborhood of $500 a ton.

With the possibilities of its new methods and new alloy steels Central Alloy is in an extremely good position to profit within the next few years from plant expansions and improvements which have been carried on since the formation of the company in 1926. During this period it has expended upward of $12,000,000 on expansion and should be ready now to translate this into better earnings.

That such progress is being made is illustrated by the much sharper increases in net than in shipments during the past two years. In 1927, the first full year of operations after the combination of the present company, and a generally poor year in the steel industry, shipments fell off 19.1 per cent from the preceding year, whereas net declined 18.1 per cent. The following year, however, decided improvement was shown when net advanced 79.8 per cent over the previous year and 47.1 per cent over 1926, while shipments were increasing 32.1 per cent over 1927 and only 6.7 per cent over 1926.

Benefits of the 1928 improvements which have been manifest only this year are evident in the increase of 48.3 per cent in net profit for the first half over the corresponding period of 1928 while shipments were only 11.1 per cent larger.

PRODUCTION COSTS CUT

Although Central Alloy clearly has made considerable progress in cutting down the costs of production on the special steels it produces it does not seem unlikely that it can continue to show improvement. Alloy steels, even though they have been produced for some time, have not received the attention awarded other steels until recently and consequently producers feel their future is particularly bright.

The alliance of Central Alloy, Ludlum and Crucible with the Krupp works of Germany, which is the pre-eminent developer of alloy steels, already has proven itself beneficial for the Americans. That Central is allied closely with Krupp is evidenced by the recent granting of Central Alloy the exclusive rights to manufacture in this country the new alloy called "Izett." This alloy, while not as yet produced here, was used successfully in the boilers of the German vessel Bremen on its record breaking trips across the Atlantic.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

G. E. DISPLAYS INCREASING EARNINGS

Large Income Brings Reports Of Stock Dividend or Split-Up to Come Soon

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—Current operations of General Electric Company continue on a record basis and there is every likelihood earnings this year will be in excess of $70,000,000 or better than $9.50 a share on 7,211,482 no par common shares outstanding, after allowing for dividend requirements on the special stock.

Business thus far in third quarter is running at about the same levels enjoyed in three months to June 30, and although September remains to be accounted for, it is likely bookings for the period will approximate the record, $119,351,248, booked in quarter ended June 30.

Due to character of business ordinarily booked in third quarter, it is probable billings for that period will taper off from $110,768,293 of net sales billed in preceding three months. Even after allowing for this, however, third quarter billings should easily approximate $100,000,000, which would permit company to report net for period of about $16,500,000, or equivalent, after deducting dividend requirements on special stock, about $2.20 a common share.

DIVIDEND OUTLOOK

Prospects for a stock dividend or split-up for General Electric shareholders have been considerably enhanced. So far as can be learned the subject has not yet come up for consideration at any recent directors' meeting but it is known matter has been semi-officially discussed and those well informed on General Electric affairs regard it as a virtually certain development of the not too distant future.

Over the course of recent years General Electric has built up unusually strong surplus position. In seven-year period, from 1922 to 1927 inclusive, surplus increased from $82,284,313 to $132,674,652 despite payment of stock dividends during period aggregating almost $43,000,000 on basis of $70,000,000 earnings this year and payment of about $46,000,000 in cash dividends on common and special stocks surplus should be further augmented during 1928 by about $24,000,000 increased total to approximately $156,000,000.

Wholesale Trade For July Higher

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Wholesale trade during July increased in general more than is usual at this season, according to reports to the Federal Reserve Board from firms in eight lines of trade. Increased sales over the previous month were shown by wholesalers of groceries, dry goods and boots and shoes, and drugs, while sales of hardware and furniture were smaller.

GENERAL TRADE UNCHANGED

The general business situation in Pittsburgh shows but little change, with retail sales in moderate volume, although averaging slightly better than they did a year ago, says R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Trade Review. There is comparatively little activity in most wholesale lines, although considerable improvement is expected after Labor Day. Dry goods sales are fair for the season, but amounts average small. Wearing apparel lines are quiet, although they have been moving somewhat better than they did last year at this time; sales of millinery are showing a slight improvement, both at wholesale and retail. Current sales of shoes are rather small, although rubber goods are showing more activity. Wholesale jewelers are transacting a fair volume of business, and sales, as a whole, are better than those of last year. Jobbers of groceries and provisions report business unusually quiet.

While steel operations have decreased to some extent, the rate of production still is well above that prevailing last August, and prospects continue favorable for a large fall business. Window glass plants are still operating at a low rate, but operations are being resumed at some plants that have been shut down, and demand is increasing. Plate glass continues very active for this period of the year, with production in July about 33 1-3 per cent greater than it was in July, 1928. In other lines, there has been little change in operations. Crude oil production is at a slightly higher rate.

The bituminous coal market continues to be dull, with a moderate increase in demand for domestic sizes, but industrial demand is very slow. Prices show little change, with Western Pennsylvania grades of run-of-mine coal quoted as follows, per net ton at mines: Steam coal, $1.25 to $1.75; coking coal, $1.50 to $1.75; gas coal, $1.65 to $1.75; steam lack, 80 cents to 90 cents, and gas slack, $1 to $1.10.

LITTLE CHANGE IN GLASS TRADE

Plate Glass Orders Hold Up Well; Estimate Big Output for Year

A slight upward trend in orders, now being booked, is reported by some of the firms manufacturing window glass, according to the National Glass Budget.

Others see little improvement. From the number of inquiries being received by the producers and the request for prompt shipment that accompany orders that are being placed, it would appear that jobbers are conducting their business with as little glass on hand as possible. Further increases in demand are anticipated during the next three months. It is not likely that production during the remainder of the year will exceed, to any extent, a monthly rate of 600,000 boxes. While a plant or two is to be placed in operation, a like capacity will go down for repairs. The small production so far this year has been the salvation of the industry, as the demand for window glass the first half was highly disappointing to those producing it.

GENERAL OUTLOOK

The glass industry in general is carefully considering the business sentiment, hoping thereby to aid in deciding as to the outlook for the fourth quarter of the year. A prediction is that shipments from window glass factories during August will be very close to production. Decidedly more glass should be shipped out of the producers' warehouses during September, October and November than is made. Manufacturers' stocks, with one or two exceptions, are rather heavy, but quite a percentage of this glass is other than popular sizes.

The rolled glass situation could be improved, as the market for this product is reported not firm in the East. This applies especially to some odd sizes thought to be accumulation of a factory. Stocks are said to be of seasonable size, with most of the factories in operation.

The United States Department of Labor conducted a nation-wide employment survey during July. A brief statement from each state, taken from the "Bulletin" concerning the building situation, indicates that the largest percentage of the building now under way is of larger structures, in which rolled and wired glass should be used extensively. It would seem that a fair volume of business should be enjoyed by the producers during the remainder of the year.

PLATE GLASS

A well sustained volume of orders continues to characterize the plate glass business. Production is slowly increasing on account of modernization of one works lately started up. Unofficial estimates place the domestic production of plate glass this year in the neighborhood of 160,000,000 square feet. During July there were 13,057,098 square feet produced. The Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company is now getting good production in its Ford City, Pa., works, which was started up a few weeks ago. Word coming from Ottawa, Ill., is to the effect that the National Plate Glass Company at that place is planning to start up its new factory at an early date, which, when running full, will have an annual capacity of about 24,000,000 square feet. With the increased production of the two works just mentioned, it would seem that the total amount of plate glass made during the year would reach the above estimate. There were 73,474,143 square feet produced during the first six months of this year. At this time there is a decided tendency towards increased production of one-eighth inch polished plate glass. It is being used extensively for glazing purposes in addition to the automobile trade.

AGWI MAY PAY $5 DIVIDEND

BOSTON, Aug. 31.—That the Atlantic Gulf and West Indies Company is very likely to resume full payment on its 5 per cent noncumulative preferred stock is voiced in sources close to company. The stock at present is on a $4 basis and in view of excellent showing for first six months and bright prospects for latter half current year. It is only reasonable to expect an increase placing the preferred on its original $5 basis by the first of the coming year, authorities believe.

Company reported earnings of $7.56 a share on the 199,512 common shares after preferred dividends for first six months. This compares with $1.85 on common in corresponding period 1928 and 81c for entire year 1927.

Directors of Atlantic Gulf and West Indies lines are extremely confident that the balance of the year will show a continuance of the prosperity. While the Ward line has suffered some depression due to Cuban sugar situation and freight business of Clyde line has been somewhat lessened as result of Florida fruit fly epidemic, passenger receipts on Clyde and Porto Rico lines and freight receipts on Mallory line have contributed towards making business for last two years extremely profitable. It is expected that improved passenger and freight conditions will guarantee a satisfactory period for this year.

Final Months of Year To Be Prosperous

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

SEASONAL recession in the Pittsburgh district has become somewhat more pronounced during the past two weeks but business activity is still far above normal and the decline has been of negligible proportions. The steel industry is still working at above 90 per cent of capacity and this is quite representative of the general activity in this district.

Even more important than the current reports, however, is the fact that the outlook for the remainder of the year is distinctly bright. This statement is true, both in respect to Pittsburgh and the country as a whole.

The conference of statisticians in industry, which operates under the auspices of the National Industrial Conference Board says, in its monthly analysis, that industrial and trade activity should continue at the present rate for some time.

July Records.

THE report points out that exceptional activity in both industry and trade continued throughout the mid-summer season, new July production records having been made in both the steel and automobile industries. Building activity increased in spite of the fact that a seasonal decline would have been in order.

In speaking of building, the report refers to the entire country. Pittsburgh has been lagging somewhat behind other sections in this respect. Building established a new high record for July, but this was due to extensive undertakings in public works, a phase of activity which was not abnormally great in Pittsburgh. In the first seven months of this year building contracts awarded in the Pittsburgh district totaled $416,617,000 compared with $430,555,000 according to the F. W. Dodge reports.

Distribution Increased.

DISTRIBUTION, as indicated by freight car loadings, has increased. In July gains were shown in all commodities except livestock. The conference of statisticians also pointed out that an interesting sidelight on sales effort is given in the data for newspaper advertising which, although showing a seasonal decline for June and July, continues to gain over 1928.

Conditions in portions of the country largely dependent on agriculture have been spotty. Losses have been suffered in some localities due to poor crop results but these have been nearly balanced by bumper crops in other sections so that the total purchasing power of agriculture for the year should come close to that of ast year.

Gains Expected.

PITTSBURGH business activity should show a seasonal gain after Labor Day. Just how pronounced this increase will be is difficult to estimate since the summer depression preceding this period has been so moderate. It is quite generally expected, however, that the automobile industry and some other steel consuming lines will be busier next month and this should materially help general business here.

The electrical industry is busy as it has been for most of this year. The railroad car builders have no great amount of new business in sight, but they are still working at a fair rate, filling orders placed earlier in the year. The Union Switch and Signal Company has an excellent order book and expects several additional large contracts shortly.

Coal Depressed.

COAL is the one gloomy spot in the picture of this district's business. Buying is very light and prices are at the lowest ebb since 1916. Domestic buying will start shortly, but this is not expected for a week or two. Industrial demand is light.

Lump coal is selling at the mines on the Pittsburgh & West Virginia at $1.85 to $2.25 a ton. Most producers are planning to put an increase of 25 cents a ton in effect on domestic coal within a few weeks. Slack is obtainable at 80 cents a ton. When the mines start to increase their runs to meet domestic requirements the supply of slack will also be increased so that there is possibility of further weakness in the price of this grade.

GOODYEAR TIRE ACTIVITIES

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—Goodyear's operations in its principal field of activity, the manufacture and sale of tires and kindred products and current earnings are understood to be running at satisfactory levels but somewhat below levels of first half. In that period Goodyear reported net of $12,633,863 or $7.02 a share on common stock. On basis of this showing there were many predictions that Goodyear would earn upwards of $15 a share for full year. However, year's total income probably will not greatly exceed $12 a share.

Successful round-the-world flight of Graf Zeppelin stimulated interest in Goodyear since it is the most important American manufacturer of lighter-than-air flying machines and is constantly broadening activities in this field. Thus far such activities have yielded no substantial profit for development and experimental costs have been heavy. This department, moreover, appears to have unlimited future possibilities and some of company's followers are very enthusiastic over its prospects.

Competition in tire industry continues extremely keen and prices are even lower than last year. Because of this Goodyear's margin of profit has been somewhat reduced. Actual output of casings at present also is below the earlier levels and is likely to gradually taper down during next few months.

Goodyear has just introduced a new type "air wheel" for use on airplanes and this is expected to meet with considerable favor and provide some attractive and profitable new business.

Marland Brings in Kettleman Well

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 31.—Marland Oil Company brought in its No. 8 well in Section 12-22-17 in Kettleman Hills. Well is reported running wild with approximately 50 barrels of oil per hour and 45,000,000 cubic feet of gas per day. Bottom hole is 6,876 feet.

CELOTEX NET UNCHANGED

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—Net income of Celotex Company for current fiscal year to date is running about equal with 1928. The showing is considered satisfactory in view of the fact that prices were reduced about $5 a thousand square feet on December 10 last and this year's income account contains a considerable non-recurring charge to cover price adjustment of dealer inventories, made on account of the reduction. In the six months ended April 30, 1929, net income was $370,338 after non-recurring charge of $214,507, against $358,400 without any such charge in the same 1928 period.

Company's second half is always larger than its first half. Second half net income last year was more than $1,000,000 against $358,400 in the first half, bringing net income for the full year ended October 31, 1928, to $1,380,622 against $817,058 in previous year.

Outlook for the final quarter is good. Company has noted of late an increase in the amount of building completed in the fall instead of the spring. At the same time, considerable modernization of old houses is being effected to increase their resale value.

Company's national advertising campaign is producing results. Gas utilities, interested in houses which can be heated at low cost, are in many cases keeping in close touch with Celotex representatives.

Purchase of a paper mill by Celotex Company reflects the comeback of the Louisiana sugar cane crop and cane development in Florida, which have put in sight an ample supply of bagasse. For the last two or three years, company has been doing experimental work to develop new products from bagasse such as mulch paper, cardboard, wrapping paper and fiber for mattresses. These products will be made in the newly acquired mill.

GREATER STEEL BUYING NEXT MONTH

Larger Volume of Buying No Indication of Rise In Use or Production

By B. E. V. LUTY

It should go without saying that there will in all probability be an increase in the volume of steel buying in September, but this would not necessarily indicate an increase in the rate of consumption or cause an increase in production.

The two-month vacation season is about to end and vacationing is strongest in the last fortnight of the period. For the short time consumers relax in their buyng, only to catch up early in September, and producton and consumption proceed as usual. On account of many consumers being covered ahead last spring, the pace of buying week by week in the last couple months has been a poor index to fundamental conditions as to requirements and consumption. At present buyers could run along for a time with former engagements because the need for covering ahead has practically disappeared.

BETTER INDICATOR

In these particular circumstances by far the better index is the known conditions in steel consuming lines and there is no little information of that sort. The automobile industry last year rose to first place as a steel consumer by taking about 18 per cent of all the steel made and in the first half of this year accounting for about 23 per cent of the steel. Seasonal records, computed by averaging the last five years, show that production in that industry runs substantially the same in the four months, July to October inclusive, then tapers off sharply for the last two months of the year. Production, measured by the number of cars and trucks, has thus far followed the former seasonal swing quite closely.

It seems to be a fair guess that while the automobile industry engaged about 23 per cent of the steel making capacity in the first half of this year it is engaging about 18 per cent in the present period, and will account for still less in November and December.

Rails are another seasonal matter. The annual orders, placed in late autumn and early winter, are now completed. Supplementary or miscellaneous buying has not amounted to a great deal, perhaps not as much as was expected, and production in connection with the next buying movement will amount to ltle until late in the year. The decrease in rail production releases some steel making capacity, say 3 to 4 per cent of the total.

A third item is that the large freight car orders placed in the forepart of the year are nearing completion. There is little inquiry now and no definite prospect of much, while in any event fresh orders would hardly get into execution soon enough to prevent a sharp dip in the steel requirements of car shops. This change may release 2 to 3 per cent of the steel making capacity.

FARM IMPLEMENT FIELD

Finally, it is now reported that the agricultural implement industry has a setback as compared with its operation in the first half of this year. Farmer buying of fencing this fall may not come up to expectations. These items are, however, relatively small. There are some curious reports being printed, of structural fabricating shops not having much work ahead, in face of Department of Commerce statistics, undoubtedly accurate, showing that in each of the last six months the shops booked more tonnage than they shipped. They may reasonably be expected to take at least as much steel in the next few months as in the recent past, and the major portion of the construction represented involves the consumption of much steel in addition to the fabricated work. Miscellaneous consumption of steel, outside the lines here considered, promises no particular change.

CONSUMPTION OFF

Altogether, there is a slipping of 10 to 15 per cent in steel consumption. From the peak rate of last May steel production has probably decreased less than 10 per cent to date. To an extent production has helped in the last few weeks by replenishment of stocks of semifinished steel depleted during the second quarter of the year. Some further decrease in steel production is to be expected, but the second half of the year should not average more than 10 per cent under the first half. That would make about 55,000,000 gross tons of ingots for the calendar year, or 10 per cent gain over 1928, which was 7 per cent above 1926, previously the record year.

Such a gain would be a heavy one, but markets are made by men who usually do not take long range philosophical views except when talking for publication, being inclined in their personal conduct to consider only the recent high rate. The individual seller would like to maintain operation in full, to hold down costs, while the individual buyer, observing that prices did not advance when mills were under pressure, is disposed to look for concessions. He may not wish to bring about a concession, but if there are any going he wants to discover and take advantage of them. Accordingly finished steel prices, quite steady thus far, will bear watching in the next few weeks.

PIG IRON MARKET

Pig iron has been somewhat duller in August than in July and furnace shipments are off a trifle. A much more active market is to be expected next month. Some coke sellers find that demand for foundry coke is increasing and foundry operations may increase.

The scrap markets are a shade easier. In the Chicago district prices are hardly as strong as expected by reason of recent purchases. In the East Bethlehem has bought 30,000 to 40,000 tons at $16.50, perhaps a little lower price than expected, and Pittsburgh district mills are quite reluctant to buy.

Members of Bond Club to Join Golf Test

Members of the Bond Club of Pittsburgh will spend Friday, September 13, at a golf tournament and outing in Cleveland as guests of the Bond Club of that city. The feature of the arrangements is the tri-cornered golf match between members of the Bond Clubs of Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Detroit.

A transportation schedule has been arranged with the P. & L. E. A special train will leave Pittsburgh Thursday evening, September 12, and will return the following Saturday morning.

Plans for the day include breakfast at the Hermit Club in Cleveland. The golf matches will be held at the Kirtland Club.

SHENANGO MILL OUTPUT LARGE

SHARON, Pa., Aug. 31.—Continued operations above normal featured the past week in Shenango Valley plants.

Carnegie Steel Company worked on its same schedule, while there was no change reported at the Farrell and Mercer plants of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company. American Steel and Wire also remained at 80 per cent.

Sharon Steel Hoop Company made no change in its schedule, which has been in force for the past several weeks.

Majority of the mills are, however, preparing for a let-down over the Labor Day period. Plant officials are optimistic as the first month of the second half of 1929 is ended.

Mexican Eagle Oil Output Decreases

LONDON, Aug. 31.—Production of Mexican Eagle Oil Company for week ended August 24 was 268,000 barrels against 265,000 in previous week and 246,000 barrels two weeks ago.

OTIS STEEL CO. DIVIDEND IS DECLARED

Common Stock Is Placed On $2.50 Annual Basis as Result of Net Gains

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—The Otis Steel Company of Cleveland, has placed the common stock on a $2.50 annual basis through the declaration of a quarterly dividend of 62½ cents, the first to be paid on the common since the recapitalization of the company in 1926.

Declaration of dividends on the common stock marks the final step in the company's rehabilitation undertaken in 1925 by E. J. Kulas, president. The first step was early in 1926 when the company refunded its 7½ per cent and 1 per cent bond issues with a new issue bearing a 6 per cent coupon. This was followed in the same year by the discharge of more than $33.00 a share of accumulated back dividends on preferred stock and the replacement of the old preferred stock by a new issue of prior preference 7 per cent stock, which was immediately placed upon a cash dividend basis.

The present issue of common stock of the company was offered to the public in July, 1929, at $39.50 a share. Control of the company had previously been purchased by an American syndicate from British investors who had held it for about 30 years. Following its offering the stock dropped to a low point of 6½ in 1924, when the aggregate value of the outstanding issue was $4,325,000. Since 1925 there has been steady improvement in the position of the company until at the current market level of around 50 the outstanding common stock has a value of more than $40,000,000.

Since 1925 the Kulas management has expended more than $15,000,000 out of earnings for maintenance and plant improvement; of this sum $6,000,000 represents plant improvement designed to increase efficiency expand the tonnage of full-finished sheets and strips for the automobile trade, and to make the plant practically self-containing, eliminating the necessity of buying semifinished steel. The progress has resulted in greatly increased earnings and important savings in production costs.

At the close of 1924 the balance sheet of the company had cash in the sum of $100 and a rate of current assets to current liabilities of 1:9 to 1.0

SPORT COMMENT

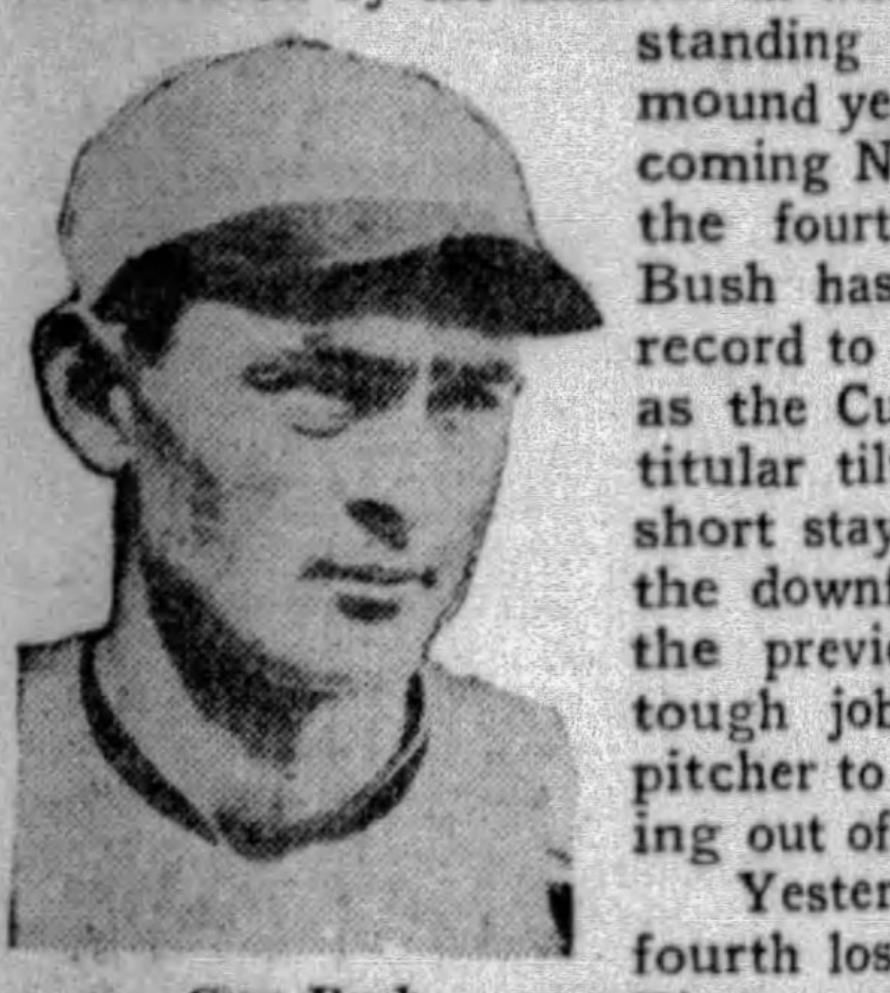
CUBS FARE AS PIRATES DID IN 1921.

THOSE suddenly aroused Pirates have no respect for even prospective world series stars in their present belated drive, as attested by the manner in which they drove one of the outstanding pitchers of the year off the mound yesterday in defeating Chicago's coming National League champions for the fourth time in succession. Guy Bush has been placing a remarkable record to his credit, and is looked upon as the Cubs' slab ace for the October titular tilt with the Athletics, but his short stay on the knoll here following the downfall of other Bruin hurlers in the previous games, showed what a tough job it is for any club or any pitcher to stop a team that is just coming out of a bad slump.



Guy Bush.

Yesterday's game was only the fourth lost by Bush this year, and the Pirates were the first Western club to beat him. His earlier defeats were suffered at the hands of the Giants, the Braves and the Robins. He still leads the senior league in number of victories with 18, but Burleigh Grimes, of the Pirates, though credited with only 17 triumphs, is ahead of the Chicago luminary in the matter of percentage.

THE possibility that the Buccaneers may make a clean sweep of five games against the Cubs by grabbing the fifth and final contest of the set this afternoon, recalls the fate that the Corsairs themselves met when, like the McCarthy crew of today, they were leading the pack in the pennant race of 1921.

Invading New York late in August with a lead of seven and a half games, the Pirates were beaten by the Giants in every event of a five-game series, starting on a slide that cost them the flag. Unfortunatley, the present drive comes too late to bring the same success to the Pirates that crowned the Giants' drive. The Cubs are too far ahead to be overtaken.

HEINIE MEINE'S big brace and impressive work yesterday in blanking the Cubs and holding them to three hits were as noteworthy as the continued rush of the Pirates, who, behind the brilliant pace of Capt. Pie Traynor, have beaten the Bruins nine times in their last 11 meetings and have sewed up the honors in the season's series by registering 12 wins over the Windy City outfit.

Meine won his first five games after joining the Pirates, but lost the next four and prior to yesterday had not earned a decision since July 15, when he beat Boston, 5 to 4 in 11 innings. Since July 15 he had not gone the distance on a single occasion.

Pie Traynor.

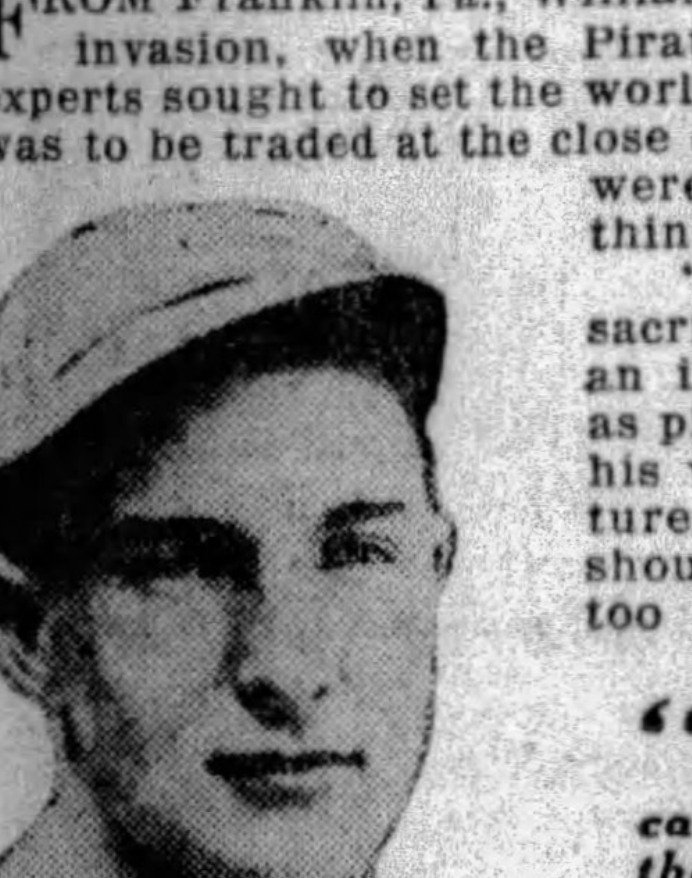
HOW many moves do you think are possible in checkers? Well, the figures run beyond a million, according to such an authority as Newell Williams Banks, champion match player, who has been defeated only once at match play in 25 years of competition. He says that to be an expert, a player must have at least 40,000 combination moves at his command. He has mastered more than 40,000 himself, he asserts, and when Harry Salsinger suggested that a man who kept in mind such a vast number of combinations could have time to think of little else, he replied: "You may not believe me when I tell you, but I have spent five-fold as much time studying the Bible as I ever spent on checkers."

YOU may be surprised to learn that physical condition has anything to do with successful checker playing, but Banks says that when he is preparing for a checker tournament he trains as carefully as a champion boxer does for a title match. He runs from 5 to 10 miles daily, punches the bag, skips the rope, plays handball, takes settting-up exercises and sticks to a prescribed diet.

His explanation is that checker tournaments drain the nervous system and tax the physical stamina of the contestants. "With the players fairly well matched the man in the best physical shape wins, so I always train at least six weeks for a tournament," he says.

FROM Franklin, Pa., William O'Brien writes: "During the Eastern invasion, when the Pirates were not themselves, some of the experts sought to set the world afire with the report that Paul Waner was to be traded at the close of the season. Just because the Pirates were not winning, they tried to start something.

"Paul Waner is too good a player to be sacrificed, and in my opinion it would be an injustice to Pittsburgh patrons as well as plain dumbness to let him go. He proved his worth in earlier years and a bright future still stretches ahead of him. He should not be allowed to get away. He is too valuable.



Paul Waner.

"THE Pirates need a first baseman, a second baseman and a veteran catcher who can steady the pitchers," the letter continues. "I believe the acquisition of Gus Suhr, San Francisco first sacker, would add a big punch to the Bucs.

"Glenn Spencer ought to prove a great help to the pitching staff next season. Pitchers Faulkner, of Buffalo; Day, of Kansas City; Nelson, of the Missions; Craighead and Daglia, of Oakland; Boone, of Indianapolis, and K. May, of Memphis, should be given a looking over by Pirate scouts."

MIKE DONLIN has come back with the same old fighting spirit that made him a winning ball player in the old days and one of the most popular diamond performers of his time. About a year ago Donlin was seriously ill and his life was despaired of, but he survived a hard battle and has now returned to work in the movies.

Donlin has been engaged by Hollywood film executives to supervise the making of baseball scenes required in various pictures that have sequences touching on the National sport. Mike's counsel is sought and his advice acted upon to assure that all baseball scenes are absolutely correct from a technical standpoint.

KID CHOCOLATE looks like a safe bet to win the world featherweight championship, and no one can deny his right to be ranked as one of the greatest little fighters brought to the front in recent years.

However, some of the Eastern ring followers appear to be stretching things a bit in pronouncing him the equal of the late George Dixon. It is one thing to be the best featherweight of today, but being a second Dixon is quite another thing again.

George Dixon.

DIXONS are not being developed these days. A featherweight equal in all-around class to the great little Negro champion of three decades ago has not been seen in the roped square since George lost his title to Terry McGovern back in 1900. As a combination of boxing science and hitting power, Dixon was far superior to Chocolate or any other modern featherweight. And that's not reckoning as qualities as an "iron man," attested by the fact that he fought one battle of 70 rounds, another of 40, no fewer than 21 of 20 rounds each and eight others of 26 rounds each.

MISSES WRIGHT AND WATTLES BEATEN

CLEVELAND, Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Streaking over the rugged Mayfield Country Club course with par-breaking golf, Mrs. Gregg Lifur, methodical shotmaker from Los Angeles, and Mrs. O. S. Hill, Kansas City veteran, swept into the final round of the Western women's championship yesterday.

Mrs. Lifur fought a brilliant uphill battle to conquer her home town rival, Kathleen Wright, on the eighteenth green, while Mrs. Hill played one of the best matches of her brilliant career to stop Peggy Wattles, of Buffalo, by a 3-and-2 margin. The two will battle over 36 holes or less today for the championship.

The Kansas City player was four under par for her required 16 holes yesterday, while Mrs. Lifur clipped two strokes from perfect figures. If Miss Wright, who gained a 2-up margin at the end of the first nine holes by 1 under par golf, had been a trifle straighter with her irons and the Buffalo player had been on her putting game, the results might have been different.

LOSES FIRST THREE HOLES

Mrs. Lifur got into a hole by dropping the first three holes to a birdie and two pars. On the first, Miss Wright sank a 15-foot downhill putt for a birdie 4. On the next two holes Mrs. Lifur three-putted. After halving the next two holes in par, Mrs. Lifur whittled her rival's margin to 2-up by laying a beautiful third iron 20 feet from the sixth pin and sinking the putt for an eagle 4. A trapped second shot by Miss Wright gave Mrs. Lifur the seventh hole, but she lost the eighth. Halving the ninth, they rounded the turn with Miss Wright 2 up.

The turning point of the match came on the twelfth. Mrs. Lifur took it and the thirteenth holes with birdie 3s, halved the next with another birdie, halved the fifteenth with a par 5, squared the match for the first time by winning the seventeenth and won it by capturing the final hole with a par 5 while Miss Wright shanked her irons badly and went two over par.

CLOSE MATCH

The Hill-Wattles match was a close one for the first nine holes only. Miss Wattles went into the lead on the first hole by slamming a 150-yard iron to within easy two-putting distance of the flag and getting a birdie 4. They played perfect golf on the third, fourth, fifth and sixth. Mrs. Hill went one up on the seventh green. Both sent their seconds rolling into a creek, but Mrs. Hill's bounced onto the green, while Peggy's bounced over once and then hit an obstruction and landed in the water. They halved the next two, giving Mrs. Hill one hole lead at the turn.

Then Mrs. Hill started her rush and Miss Wattles began faltering with her putter. The Kansas Cityan increased her lead by getting birdies on the tenth and eleventh, halved the short twelfth with another birdie and went 4 up by bagging her fourth consecutive birdie on the easy par 4 thirteenth. On the tenth and eleventh holes, Miss Wattles ruined chances to halve by three-putting. However, she whittled her rival's lead to 2 up by winning the fourteenth and fifteenth, Mrs. Hill taking three putts on each. Another fatal three-putt green on the sixteenth ended the struggle.

MONDAY—THE MILLS OF GOD.

RODGERS PREPS FOR M'COY GO MONDAY

Jackie Rodgers, the little Negro bantam, of the North Side, who carries plenty of sleeping powder in his right mitt, is training intensively for his coming bout with Johnny McCoy, of Buffalo, Monday night at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, which tops a double wind-up card. And on the other side of the fence, McCoy has been doing a lot of hard work in getting himself in shape for the tussle, for he seems to realize that Jackie is going to be a tough opponent.

Ray Kiser, the slugging stablemate of Tony Herrera, is in the other half of the twin bill with Jimmy Reed, of Erie, as his antagonist. This will be Reed's initial showing before local fight fans, and the Erie lad, a seasoned exponent in the art of give and take, has a good chance of beating the Alvis entry. Andy Andrucci and Joe Boychan, of Steubenville, are paired for the six-round second bout, with Jimmy Belmont meeting Howard Williams, Swissvale Negro, in the six-round opening number.

Francis Flynn, promoter of the popular-price Moose Temple weekly boxing shows, announces plans are complete for his opening show Friday night. Jack Wells and Harry Williams, heavyweights, are scheduled for the 10-round main go, with Jimmy Belmont, of Braddock, tackling Mike Cima, a rugged mauler of Turtle Creek, in the six-round semi-final.

Georgie Chamber, of the North Side, who decided to fight for money instead of medals only a short time ago, is thrown against a tough hombre, Frank Munroe, of Fair Haven, in the six-round second bout. Cowboy, another recent graduate from the amateurs, boxes Tommy Ward, of the South Side, in the opening go, also of six rounds.

Young Corbett Stops Lawless in First

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Young Corbett, southpaw boxing wizard from Fresno, knocked out Bucky Lawless, tough youngster from Syracuse, N. Y., in the first round of their scheduled 10-round bout here last night. A stinging left to the body and another to the jaw dropped Lawless for the full count.

Washington Typos Win Crown Again

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Washington scored four runs in the ninth inning to win, 6 to 5, in the championship game of the Union Printers' International baseball tourrnament yesterday. It is the eighth consecutive championship for the winners.

Awarding of trophies was held last night at the annual farewell banquet.

BUSH LEAVES FOR HOME IN INDIANAPOLIS

Donie Bush left for his Indianapolis home this morning. The popular pilot of the Buccos for almost three seasons does not expect to take any active part in the sport for the remainder of the season, but he is almost certain to be back in some good position next year. It has been whispered that Donie will be seen in a major league managerial role again next season. In any event, he is sure to be in some lucrative sport.

GOOD ON DEFENSE

Ira Flagstead made Pirate followers like him as he played left field during the big setback handed the Cubs. "Flaggie" knows how to play the various hitters, he being almost directly in front of a couple of left-center liners that flashed off Chicago bats.

Joe Harris, who played with Flagstead for several seasons, insists that Ira was close to Tris Speaker as a defensive centerfielder when he was playing regularly in the American League. And the vet seems to be very fast at this period of his career. He slipped from first to third on a hit yesterday after the fashion of a sprinter.

ROLLY HAS ARRIVED

Harris, by the way, thinks Rolly Hemsley has arrived and is one of the league's best catchers. Joe was one of the first to place the stamp of approval on the coal miner when Rolly rolled in from the Blue Ridge League. If Mickey Cochrane has more ability than the Pittsburgh youngster he must be a corker, sure enough—and Mickey might be able to outrun the Pirate recruit, but before Pittsburgh fans would believe it they would have to see them matched.

Heine Meine's pitching was a work of slab art. Heinie bent his fine curve on the outside corner in such a smart manner as to fool the de luxe batters in the McCarthy household. He was facing a whole team of righthand hitters and he worked accordingly. Hemsley handled him after the manner of a veteran of many campaigns.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

"Let's make it five in a row!" was the unanimous cry of the Pirates today, and it was not sweet music to the ears of the Cubs, by any means, even if Marse Joe and his hustlers are 10½ games in front. This business of being trimmed so many times in succession has begun to grate upon the nerves of the Cubs, even if they are admitted to be just about "in" so far as this year's flag chase is concerned.

After losing their fourth game in a row to the Pirates yesterday—and by the one-sided score of 15 to 0—the Bears could not be blamed for wishing to get this series over. The game slated for this afternoon is the finale of the series, and while the Bruins will leave no stone unturned to win it, it is altogether probable that some of the Chicago boys would not weep copious tears if rain were to interfere with the proceedings. The visitors are in a severe batting slump here and there is no assurance they will be out of it as they make their last appearance of the season in the Oakland Orchard.

BRAME TO START

Manager Ens will call upon Ervin Brame for mound duty this afternoon, and it will fall to the lot of the tall Kentuckian to twirl against Charlie Root, one of McCarthy's many stars of the slab.

Ens is likely to keep Ira Flagstead in left field in view of the performance of the veteran yesterday after replacing the injured Comorosky. Flagstead played a fine game on defense and his bat was an important factor in the big drives staged by the Freebooters as they overwhelmed the Cubs.

Heinie Meine came out of yesterday's battle as the slab hero, although he had to share his victory honors with Capt. Traynor and other lights of the home team. The boy with the musical name held the Chicago wreckers to three hits, two of which were of the infield variety, and he was their master all the way. The Buccos, in contrast, hammered the slants of Guy Bush and Art Nehf to all sections of the Oakland Orchard. Oh, what a drubbing Our Boys gave the enemy as they piled up 21 hits!

PIE LEADS ATTACK

Traynor led the attack of his favorite club with five hits in five times at bat, including a two-sacker. The Pirates began to score in the first, which was featured by a Waner tally, the brothers hooking up a double and a single for the counter.

Bush "got by" in the second safely, but the third saw another Pittsburgh tally go over, and in the fourth the Chicago sharpshooter was shelled off the mound under an avalanche of counters. Nehf went out to rescue him, and the veteran left-hander was treated just as harshly, the upshot of the round being six tallies.

In the three succeeding rounds Nehf found the Pirate hitters in a furious mood. They solved him for 11 hits and seven tallies in these three frames, but the home boys didn't need many of their huge total in view of the quality of Meine's slab work.

HAIG COPS

CHARLEVOIX, Mich., Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Walter Hagen, British open champion, yesterday won the first Great Lakes open golf tournament with a score of 277.

ENGLISH STARS MAKE GREAT SHOWING

BROOKLINE, Mass., Aug. 31.—(AP.)—The British invasion made a great showing in the National doubles tennis championship tournament here yesterday and when the volleying was over, America had but a quarter interest in the mixed teams' final match.

That tourney reached the last bracket when Miss Betty Nuthall, of England, and George M. Lott, Jr., of Chicago, and Mrs. B. C. Covell, and Henry W. (Bunny) Austin, both of England, succeeded in their semi-finals match.

The international pair defeated an English team, comprising Mrs. Phoebe Watson and J. S. Olliff, 6-3, 6-7, 6-1, and Mrs. Covell and Austin became finalists by vanquishing Mrs. D. C. Shepherd-Barron of England and Norman Farquharson, South African Davis Cup player, 6-2, 6-2.

These finalists will clash today for the title left undefended by Miss Helen Wills, world champion, and Jack Hawkes, of Australia, following the struggle between Lott and Johnny Doeg of Santa Monica, Cal., and the Texans, Berkeley Bell and Lewis N. White, for the men's national doubles championship.

Fred Baggs and Dr. William Rosenblum, both of New York, regained their National veterans doubles tennis championship by defeating B. S. Blake and Onanning Frothingham, of Boston, 6-3, 6-4, in the final. They defaulted last year when Irving Wright and Harry Johnson, also of Boston, won the title.

The National father and son doubles play was reduced to the final when J. D. E. and A. W. Jones, of Providence, R. I., the defending champions, defeated C. K. Shaw, senior and Junior, also of Providence, 6-1, 6-1. In the other semi-final match H. H. Bassford, senior and junior, eliminated S. P. Hayes, senior and junior, all of Boston, in an extra set match, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

BUSH LEAVES FOR HOME

weeks ago, Meine, with almost the same stuff as he carried to the mound against the hard-hitting Bruins yesterday, was smeared by the Albany club of the Eastern League. Take it from Heinie, it is much easier to pitch in the big show.

The Albany batters, however, were entire strangers to Meine, so he just pitched straightaway, and they hit the same way with great eclat. Meine likes to study the hitters and apparently he knows how to serve the pellet to Rogers Hornsby & Co.

HOPEFUL STAKE ENDS MEETING AT SARATOGA

Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Beautiful Saratoga was ready today to bow its way out of the 1929 turf picture with way of the 1929 turf picture with one grand flourish that will bring together 11 of America's greatest 2-year olds in the twenty-fifth battle for the rich Hopeful stake.

Rain or shine, and there is much evidence of the former, 40,000 of the rank and file as well as the elite of racing are expected to pack their way into the low rambling clubhouse and grand stand to watch the race that will go a long way toward solving the juvenile championship problem. Leading the field home over the six and one-half furlong racing strip will be worth $55,000.

The quaint upstate town, located on the outskirts of the Adirondack Mountains last night was a seething mass of thoroughbred fans. It was Saratoga ready for the last splurge before bidding farewell to the sport that annually quintuples its population during the month of August.

WHITNEY ENTRY FAVORED

And through the stir and bustle and the mass of track gossip the names of Whichone, Boojum and Harry Payne Whitney swept as if magic propelled them up and down the streets, into the business houses and through the hotels, cabarets and night clubs. Hailed as the most powerful Hopeful entry in years, Whichone and Boojum will carry the light blue colors of Whitney to the post as odds on favorite. The quotations were 3 to 5.

Boojum, undefeated in two starts at Belmont Park, gets into the fracas with only 117 pounds in the saddle, a part of which will be Pony McAtee, while Whichone will carry 125 pounds, including Sonny Workman.

Packing the top weight of 127 pounds will be two long shots—Caruso, the hope of W. R. Coe and victor in two stake events at the Spa, and Sarazen II, a speedy, but inconsistent colt from the fair stable of Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt. In the same weight class as Whichone will be Black Majesty, the other half of the Coe entry, and Jim Dandy, long shot winner of the Grand Union Hotel stakes from Chafee Earl's California Stable.

MUD HORSE

Jim Dandy is quoted at 4 to 1, but give this Western colt heavy going and the odds are likely to shoot down to where he will be even money, when the barrier goes up. He showed a world of speed in winning the Grand Union over the best the Spa had to offer.

And then comes the big threat with only 114 pounds to carry—Galaday—hailed as the greatest filly of the West and owned by R. S. Clark. The Western miss was defeated in her Eastern debut, but is said to be all set for today's stake and will go to the post at 4 to 1 or better.

Fight Results

At Erie—Johnny Hardtack won on foul from Jimmy Reed, 3 rounds; Leo Mozdy defeated Scotty Ferguson, 8 rounds; Billy Edwards defeated Mickey O'Donnell, 6 rounds; Johnny Freeman won on foul from Joe Dudas, 3 rounds; Bombarding Connelly defeated Otto Okesson, 4 rounds.

How Cubs, Athletics Can Clinch Pennants

NATIONAL LEAGUE

GAMES TO PLAY

CUBS—31—With Pittsburgh, 2; with New York, 4; with St. Louis, 7; with Brooklyn, 4; with Cincinnati, 7; with Philadelphia, 4; with Boston, 3.

PIRATES—32—With Chicago 2; with New York, 4; with St. Louis, 7; with Cincinnati, 5; with Boston, 5; with Philadelphia, 3; with Brooklyn, 6.

TEN and one-half games ahead of the Pirates, the Cubs can clinch the pennant by winning 22 out of the 31 games. The Pirates could not pass them even if they won all of their 32 remaining games. The standing would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
CHICAGO	104	50	.675
PITTSBURGH	103	51	.669

IF the Cubs win only 16 out of their remaining 31 games the Pirates would have to win 28 out of 32 to finish in front: The standing would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
PITTSBURGH	99	55	.641
CHICAGO	98	56	.636

AMERICAN LEAGUE

GAMES TO PLAY

ATHLETICS—28—With New York, 5; with Cleveland, 4; with St. Louis, 4; with Detroit, 3; with Washington, 4; with Chicago, 4; with Boston, 4.

YANKEES—32—With Philadelphia, 5; with Cleveland, 5; With St. Louis, 4; with Detroit, 5; with Washington, 6; with Chicago, 4; with Boston, 3.

THIRTEEN full games ahead of the Yankees, the Athletics still need only 18 victories out of 28 games to clinch the pennant. The Yankees could not pass them even if they won all of their remaining 34 games. The standing would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
PHILADELPHIA	104	50	.675
NEW YORK	103	51	.669

IF the Athletics win only 14 out of the 28 games the Yankees would have to win 30 out of the 32 to finish in front of them. The standing at the finish of the season would be:

	W.	L.	Pct.
NEW YORK	101	53	.656
PHILADELPHIA	100	54	.649

(EVERY GAME THE PIRATES AND YANKEES LOSE FROM NOW UNTIL THE END OF THE SEASON MEANS ONE LESS VICTORY THE CUBS AND ATHLETICS WILL NEED TO CLINCH THE PENNANTS IN THEIR RESPECTIVE LEAGUES.)

NEW ORLEANS IN FINAL

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Aug. 31.—(AP.)—New Orleans won the final game of the all-Western Legion tournament here yesterday by defeating Portland, Ore., by a score of 6 to 5. They left last night for Louisville, Ky., where they will play Buffalo, all-Eastern champion, September, 4, 5 and 6 for the national title.

Although a boys' team, the New Orleans nine played a men's game of baseball.

Cardone, New Orleans' pitching star, who replaced Rizzo in the second inning and in the remaining seven innings struck out seven of the batters who faced him, allowed only three hits—and then proceeded to smack out a double in the last of the sixth, went to third on a passed ball, and came home on a fielder's choice with the winning run.

Rain held up the game twice, once in the fifth inning and again at the start of the ninth.

At Louisville there will be a three-game series for the championship of the country.

CUBS MAY BE CHAMPS, BUT NOT OVER BUCS

BRUINS' LEAD REDUCED TO 101-2

Associated Press.

The Cubs almost certainly will become champions of the National League within the next month, but they never can be champions of the Pirates of 1929. The Pirates attended to this small detail in person at Forbes Field yesterday when they took Mr. Guy Bush and the Bruins by the convincing score of 15 to 0 for the twelfth Pittsburgh victory over Chicago this season and the fourth in three days. The Cubs have won only eight games from the Buccaneers, with two more to go, one today here and one on the final day of the season in Chicago.

CUBS SUBDUED

Four straight Pittsburgh victories have reduced the Chicago lead only from 14½ games to 10½, but another success for the arms of Dreyfuss today would give Joe McCarthy good reason to worry. It seems impossible that such a lead could be blown, but the moral effect of a fifth straight reverse upon the Cubs might leave them easy prey for succeeding foes.

Carl Hubbell got a bad break when a fumble by Travis Jackson in the tenth inning at Ebbets Field caused him to drop a 2-to-1 decision to Dazzy Vance and the Robins, but then the Giants were fortunate in a way that the tenth inning was played at all. They got only four hits off the Dazzler, but one of these was a drive by Fred Leach to the top of the right field wall. The ball could just as easily have dropped back into the playing field for a double, but instead it went into the street for a home run, keeping the Giants in the running.

KLEIN HITS 34TH

Chuck Klein's thirty-fourth home run sent him into the National League lead over Hack Wilson and Melvin Ott, and incidentally helped the Phillies down the Braves by 9 to 5 at Boston. St. Louis and Cincinnati were not scheduled.

With the Western clubs enjoying an open date and with the Yankees and the Senators rained out, the Athletics and the Red Sox had the American League stage to themselves. The Macks celebrated by permitting Jack Russell to hold them down to seven blows as the hustling Bostonese picked up 10 off the Messrs. Earnshaw and Rommel to win a close game by 4 to 2.

Earnshaw was seeking his twentieth victory, an occupation which has kept him busy for some time now. The Athletics lost half a game of their lead, of course, but the margin at nightfall last night, nevertheless, was 13 games.

ZACH TAYLOR

Taylor labored with mask and glove for the lowly Braves for several seasons before he got his "big chance" with the Chicago Cubs, but he did not labor in vain, for today he is regarded as a star who contributed much to the Bruins' pennant dash in the present campaign. Zach was obtained by the Cubs when Gabby Hartnett's throwing arm failed him, at the start of the '29 race.

MILKMEN TIE TITLE SERIES

The Reick-McJunkin nine tied up the series for the Commercial and Industrial Baseball League championship by defeating the Carnegie Steel nine in the second game of the series by a 5-to-0 score at the Salt Works grounds last evening.

The Steelers won the first game by a 7-to-5 score. The third and final game will be played next week. The score:

Pittsburgh Railways met defeat at the hands of Duquesne Light, 4 to 3, in their Philadelphia Company League contest last night, thereby settling an old feud. Capelli held the Lighters to six hits, while his own team got eight, but it was of no avail.

The dope bucket was upset in a Spaulding invitation series game when Mt. Lebanon trounced Verona by a 9-to-3 score. The winner piled up an early lead and kept it.

Pleasant Valley Smilers made short work of Dormont at Wilson Park last evening, winning by a 7-to-2 tally. Mitchell yielded seven hits and Arand nine.

Blawnox fell before Book Shoe, 15 to 4, in their contest at Olympia Park.

Big Fields Assured For Ebensburg Races

EBENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 31.—Nearly 200 of the 250 horses that have been racing during the Cumberland, Md., session which ends today, will be moved here tonight or tomorrow to strive for the purses offered by the Cambria County Fair during its six-day session, which opens on Monday.

Many horsemen who had intended shipping down to the Timonium, Md., meeting, which also opens Monday, have changed their minds, and will come here, as it is less than two hours run by motor, whereas it takes at least a half-day to ship to Timonium.

Blair C. Seeds, president of the Cambria County Fair, which will operate next week's meeting, has made arrangements to handle 300 horses, the largest thoroughbred colony to attend a half-mile meeting anywhere in the East.

The same list of officials who so thoroughly carried out the July meeting to the satisfaction of fans and horsemen alike, will again be on the job here next week.

LA BARBA WINS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Fidel LaBarba, former flyweight champion of the world, hooked his way to a technical knockout victory over Jackie Mandell in a scheduled 10-round bout here last night.

Jones Shoots 67 To Set Record On Coast

DEL MONTE, Cal., Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Bobby Jones burned up the Pebble Beach links yesterday, smashing his own course record with a sensational 67 in practice for the national amateur golf championship. The champion was five under par and three under the mark set two days ago.

Jones played perfect golf after the first three holes. He lost a stroke to par on the second and third. From the fifth through the thirteenth he reeled off nine holes in exactly 28 strokes, bagging seven birdies. His card:

TAYLOR EARNS 'GOOD BREAK'

"From Rags to Riches" could be the true title of an Alger romance written around the baseball career of Catcher Zach Taylor, who rose from obscurity to play an important part in putting the Cubs on their pedestal.

Only a few months ago, Zachariah was among those lowly Braves, who were glad when the "first and fifteenth" rolled around, and there wasn't nearly as much in Zach's envelope as there will be next year.

Yet Taylor always was a willing and competent performer—the matter of catching a double-header on a hot day had no terrors for him, and in the long run his persistence has brought heavy premiums.

When Joe McCarthy became desperate for a receiver to fill the role made vacant through Hartnett's inability to throw, he cast longing eyes on Taylor, whom he was able to acquire. And when Zach joined the Bears, Marse Joe's pitchers began to do their stuff in a more competent manner. Taylor is a big boy who can stand a lot of work; his habits are fine and he is a dangerous batter.

OLD NET KING LINKS STAR

DEL MONTE, Cal., Aug. 31.—(AP.)—The California "comet" may never blaze on the links as he did 15 to 20 years ago on the courts, but for all that the competitive spirit still burns in Maurice E. McLoughlin.

The former tennis champion of the world, who will make his debut in the national amateur golf championship at Pebble Beach Monday, is applying to the royal and ancient game now the same concentrated energy and skill that once made him so famous on the turf of Wimbledon and Forest Hills.

"There's just one thing I'd like to do here," said McLoughlin today, "and that is to qualify and then draw Bobby Jones in the first round to learn just how this game should be played."

McLoughlin has found his great experiment in the shift from tennis to golf. He declared that the principle of handling body weight for the stroke is much the same in golf and in tennis, the difference being in its application.

"I had to undo a lot that I had learned in tennis before I began to hit a golf ball properly," said the tennis marvel of other days. "If I had it to do all over again, I think I would have taken up golf earlier, but you know we didn't think so much of the game when I was playing championship tennis."

GRAYS WIN, 14-8

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 31.—Opening with a vicious assault on Cooper, the Homestead Grays scored six runs in the first inning and defeated Hilldale 14 to 8 here yesterday, to draw a game closer to the American Negro League leader. KEATING COPS MARATHON SWIM

TORONTO, Ont., Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Edward F. Keating, of New York, outswam rivals and outgamed the chilly waters of Lake Ontario to capture the fourth annual Wrigley 15-mile marathon swim and added $25,000 to his bankroll yesterday.

While cold water, cramps and physical exhaustion were taking a heavy toll of the big field, Keating's powerful stroke carried him to a 500-yard victory over the giant German, Ernest Vierkoetter, now a resident of Toronto.

COMES FROM BEHIND

From eleventh place at the end of the first of the eight and one-half laps, Keating forged ahead steadily until he gained the lead from Norman Ross, of Chicago, on the seventh lap. From then on the New Yorker was never seriously threatened, although Vierkoetter set a desperate pace on the last lap in a vain effort to overhaul the leader. Second place gained for Vierkoetter a cash award of $5,000.

Ross, the pace-setter for a good part of the long grind, weakened badly on the last two laps, but had enough stamina left to finish third and win $2,000 prize money.

YOUNGSTER FOURTH

Fourth place and $1,500 went to a dark horse, Izador Sponder, of Port Colborne, Ont., a 16-year-old boy, and fifth to Mendell Burditt, of Toronto, who won $1,000 for his efforts.

The official time for the leaders follows:

Keating, 8:18:13 1-5; Vierkoetter, 8:31:39 3-5; Norman Ross, 8:49:41 1-5; Sponder, 9:00:49 3-5; Burditt, 9:15:58 3-5.

Gamely battling his way through the chilly waters of the lake, Myron Cox, of Venice, Cal., finished sixth after being in the water ten and one-half hours. By finishing the 15-mile course, Cox captured the last prize award of $500.

COLLAPSES AT FINISH

Marvin Nelson, of Fort Dodge, Ia., who had ranked well with the leaders for most of the distance, collapsed when he was within 100 yards of the finish line and was pulled from the water. As he neared the finish line, he faltered. Encouragement was shouted to him, but he collapsed completely and had to be taken into a boat with the lights on the finishing dock twinkling brightly ahead of him.

Three swimmers carried the lead during the day. Clarence Ross, of Brooklyn, set the pace at the start, but his terrific stroking proved his undoing. He became exhausted and dropped back slowly and was passed by Norman Ross, Nelson, Keating and Vierkoetter. Shortly afterwards the Brooklyn boy fell victim to the cold water, unable to lift his arms. He began to sink and was quickly hauled into his escorting boat. Taken to a hospital, he was unconscious for several minutes.

It was at this point that Keating's powerful strokes brought him his reward. With only Norman Ross in front of him, Keating set out in dogged fashion to gain the lead. He did not sprint, but his steady stroke gradually cut away Ross' lead until with three-quarters of the seventh lap completed, the New Yorker forged ahead into the lead, never to be headed.

YOUNG GETS CRAMPS

Lake Ontario was no respecter of persons. George Young, conqueror of Catalina Channel three years ago, was hauled out after three laps. He swam to the seawall without offering any explanation to his millionaire backer, Teddy Oke, of Toronto, but later, at a hospital, he declared he had suffered severe stomach cramps.

Among the others who were forced to drop out were Lyle Hubbard, of Toledo; Byron Summers, of Los Angeles; Harold Florence, of New York, and John W. McMahon, of New London, Conn., all of them well up among the leaders when the cold water proved too much for them.

FINAL ALTOONA TRIALS TODAY

ALTOONA, Aug. 31.—The final qualification heats for the 200-mile automobile classic at the Altoona Speedway here Labor Day are scheduled today. Most of the drivers have already qualified, but several will get their last chance.

The headliners are all sure starters, but there is a chance that some of those who have yet to qualify will set a new track record. As it is now, three drivers are tied for the high mark at 130.01 miles per hour, which means that they will either have to draw for the pole position or try another preliminary heat in case their speed is not bettered Saturday.

Interest in the big classic is at a high point and a vast influx of speed enthusiasts is looked for here on Sunday and Monday. A party of Pittsburghers will fly here from the Steel City today, leaving Bettis Field, McKeesport, at 3 in the afternoon.

INVESTIGATION OF AMATEURS PLANNED

DEL MONTE, Cal., Aug. 31.—(AP.)—A possible echo to the case of Johnny Dawson, withdrawn from the National amateur golf championship because of connection with a sporting goods firm, has developed here. It involved John Goodman, Omaha star, who gained fame this spring by leading golfers of the entire country in sectional qualifying play for the National open tournament.

Goodman also is employed by a sporting goods firm, but whether this connection would lead to action similar to that in Dawson's case was not disclosed by officials of the United States Golf Association. It was explained that Dawson, because of his prominence, was considered a special case. It is understood however, that Goodman's status would be the subject of investigation under the rule which specifically bars from the amateur championship players who capitalize their playing skill in the sporting goods business.

Withdrawals in the tourney were increased to 14 by two additional scratches. Howard Hughes, of Houston, Tex., was forced out by a dislocated arm. Rudolph Juran, of Minneapolis, also has withdrawn.

The tournament will be played here Sept. 2 to 7.

Richard Gould, 14, Elyria, O., had 350; Richard Heller, 14, Altoona, Pa., had 340; Mildred Harker, 14, Baltimore, Md., had 323, and Francis W. Parker, Highland Park, Ill., had 323. Wiles won this event last year with a score of 341.

W. Arthur Ferguson, 17, of Macon, Ga., won in Class A with a score of 374. Following him were Emmett Casson, 16, Macon, Ga., 371; Milton Miller, 16, Columbus, O., and Lewis Gould, 17, South Braintree, Mass., with 367; Lemuel Clark, 18, Macon, Ga., with 362. David McDougal, of Washington, D. C., won last year with 377.

MIKE HALL VICTOR

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—(AP.)—Mike Hall, R. M. Eastman's 5-year-old gelding, which is soon to go abroad, won his fourth consecutive victory yesterday—the Englewood purse at Lincoln Fields. Canaan from the Le Mark Stock farm was second and Royal Julian third.

Naishapur, Chafee Earl's promising 3-year-old, which won the TiJuana Derby and then ran second in the Coffroth, the Kentucky and American derbies, returned to racing at Saratoga, but finished third in the Chatham Handicap—a gallop of a mile for 3-year olds. Clean Play led the field home with Princess Tina second. The Greentree Stable's Comstockery ran one of his good races to finish first, but was disqualified.

The second edition of the consolation stakes at Saratoga found the Jadell Stable's Gregory the winner with Jean Lafitte the favorite, second and Sumor third. The win of the six-furlong jaunt was worth $2,430.

TWO WORLD MARKS FALL

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 31.—(AP).—Two world records broken, a new season's mark set and a burlesque on harness racing marked the final day of the Grand Circuit program at the New York State Fair yesterday.

Dewey McKinney surprised the wise ones, and even his own stable, by taking the first heat of the 2:05 trotting event from Hazleton, trotting he mile in 2:01¾ for a new season's mark at that gait. The last half was covered in 59½ seconds.

Hazleton came through the second heat in 2:02, the final quarter in 29 seconds. This set a world mark for two heats trotting. In the third round Hazleton again won, this time in 2:02½, setting a world mark for three heats trotting.

Neil Brooke came through to win the unfinished race of Thursday, Sampson Hal, the 2:18 pace with Wayne Direct taking the second heat.

HARMSWORTH REGATTA OPENS

DETROIT, Aug. 31.—(AP).—For the third time since Gar Wood won the Harmsworth speedboat trophy at Cowes, England, in 1920, a British hydroplane will attempt to recover it on the Detroit River in a three-day regatta beginning today. A mere slip of a girl, Marian Barbara Carstairs, is the challenger. Wood defended it against a French challenger in 1926.

Coming with one speedboat, her Estelle IV, she is pitting her skill as a pilot and the power and seaworthiness of her craft against the prowess and the renowned Gar Wood and three-hydroplanes representing the United States. To win the trophy, the English girl must out-distance all three of these boats in two heats. Under the rules of Harmsworth competition a contesting country must win two heats, although not necessarily with the same craft.

Miss Carstairs has undertaken a big task in essaying to lift the trophy with only one boat and pit it against Miss America VIII, which Gad Wood will pilot; Miss America VII, to be piloted by George Wood, and Miss Los Angeles II, representing the California Yacht Club. The Miss America VII holds the world straightaway record of 92.86 miles an hour.

A dozen events for outboard motor craft, cruisers and runabout motor boats will complete the regatta program.

REPUBLIC PLANS BAR INCREASE

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Aug. 31.—If purchase of the Union Drawn Steel Company, whose principal plant is at Beaver Falls, Pa., is consummated by the Republic Iron and Steel Company, the deal will permit Republic to substantially enlarge production of steel bars. It will also afford a steady outlet for such production. Republic now ranks as one of the largest producers of merchant bars in the country.

Union Drawn Steel Company operates plants in Detroit and Chicago, in addition to its Beaver Falls property, and consumes annually between 250,000 and 300,000 tons of steel. It converts this steel into cold-drawn products, especially shafting and axle stock.

President E. T. McCleary, of the Republic company, advises that negotiations have not been concluded. It is understood the deal is on the basis of acquiring common stock of the Union Drawn company in exchange for common of Republic.

BUGS BAER Says

THUNDER ON THE MEZZANINE

EVERY time we say anything about Col. Bob Ingersoll, we get hundreds of protests from his admirers.

"Bugs" Baer

Still, his most fervent adherents cannot deny that the most dramatic spot in Col. Bob's speech was when he stretched his hands toward the heavens and requested to be lowbridged with a bolt of lightning.

There was a little man up in Schenectady who could have obliged Bob with neatness and amperage.

His name was Steinmetz. He was the boy who invented indoor lightning.

Yessir, Steinmetz could have scorched Bob's coattails with a million volts of the finest electrical effects.

The experiments in tailor-made thunderbolts still continue up in Schenectady, and the General Electric is new ready to supply the retail trade with crackling thunderbombs for the home.

This popping stuff will leap a space of 16 feet and knock you for a redhot goal.

All you have to do is press a button and a swishing streak of French-fried atmosphere bounces across the room and cooks you to a perpetual cinder.

Just what effect this will have on furnishing the home is difficult to interpret.

In the hands of an indignant parent it will be dangerous to young men of the lounge variety.

When Oscar is sitting on the parlor sofa with Beatrice, the old man will be the engineer at the switch. If Oscar gets too oscary, all the old man does is to pull the throttle and a bolt of Schenectady orange juice hops over the parlor lamp and blasts Oscar out of the suburban districts.

These zig-zaggy chunks of incandescent sideswipes will be handy in little family quarrels.

In case of panic, we advise you to beat your neighbor to the switch.

We do not think they will be practical for boiling eggs until the hens learn to lay fireproof doorknobs.

The effect of a million volts of Edison sap striking an egg in the face would be terrific.

But they would be all right for Hamburgering, fricasees and hash.

And not bad for curling hair.

GEORGE, HOW DID YOU LIKE ROLLO? HE CERTAINLY WAS JUST WONDERFUL TO PEGGY AND ME AT HIGH BILLOWS. HE TOOK US RIDING IN HIS PLANE. SENT US CANDY, FLOWERS...... WE HAD DINNER WITH HIM TWO OR THREE TIMES.
HE SEEMED DEPRESSED ABOUT SOMETHING THIS EVENING.
A MAN WITH A NAME LIKE ROLLO GOOBER SHOULD FEEL DEPRESSED ALL THE TIME.
OH GEORGE BUNGLE, DON'T BE SO FRESH. A MAN'S CHARACTER IS MORE IMPORTANT THAN HIS NAME. THE IDEA!
I'LL SAY SO. HE'S VERY JOLLY. OR WAS AT HIGH BILLOWS.
FROM THE WAY HE KEPT LOOKING AT THE WALLS AND CEILING ALL THE WHILE HE WAS HERE, ANYONE WOULD GET THE IDEA HE WAS AN INTERIOR DECORATOR JUST DYING TO TALK SHOP.
HE LOOKED BORED BECAUSE YOU INSISTED UPON TELLING HIM........ A MAN WHO OWNS SIX...... ALL ABOUT AEROPLANES. EVERY TIME HE STARTED TO SPEAK YOU GOT READY TO CONTRADICT HIM BEFORE YOU EVEN KNEW WHAT HE WAS TO SAY.
HE WAS ANNOYED. SOMETHING YOU DID, DAD, GOT ON HIS NERVES.
WELL IF YOU WANT THE TRUTH HE WAS NO TONIC FOR MY NERVES, EITHER.
ANYBODY CAN OWN A PLANE THESE DAYS. ALL YOU NEED IS THE DOWN PAYMENT AND CONCENTRATE ON THE IDEA THAT WHAT GOES UP MUST COME DOWN.
WHY DAD I JUST CAN'T IMAGINE WHY YOU LIKE TO MAKE FUN OF MR. GOOBER.

Latest photograph, which Mr. Frisby has ordered hung in Smithsonian Institution.

WASHINGTON—Late yesterday, Congressman Horace B. Frisby dealt a telling blow to crime by announcing the Frisby Law-Support Committee. "This Committee," Frisby declared, "will be composed of the entire population working together on the Frisby Distribution Plan, so that all the citizens may support all the laws."

"For months," he continued, "I have been counting laws and citizens in an effort to put my distribution plan on a sound basis, and now I am happy to state, they balance perfectly.

"Nothing now remains but to assign each law to a citizen who will pledge himself to support it. And this, I promise you, will be done without fear or favor. Frisby has no ax to grind."

Safety of Empire Demands That Britain Uphold Her Palestine Mandate and Stop Massacres

> "And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the Kingdom of God."—Luke 9, 62.

It is not possible to exaggerate the horror of recent events in Jerusalem and throughout Palestine.

Peaceable Jewish settlers, agriculturists and businessmen that have enormously increased the prosperity of the whole country, multiplying by five the wages paid to their Arab neighbors, taken by surprise, have been massacred in great numbers.

It is the old story of bitter, brutal, unreasoning race and religious hatred.

The Mosque of Omar, sacred to Mohammedans is, unfortunately, located close to what is left of the ancient temple of Jerusalem, including the "Wailing Wall." The more ignorant, and therefore most fanatical, among the Arabs are as ruthless today as they were in the days of Mohammed, fourteen hundred years ago.

And today, as in his day, their cure for "unbelief" is murder.

Cable dispatches have told the horrible story of men, women and children, surprised by overwhelming numbers, stabbed and clubbed to death.

Fortunately, the British Government, accused of negligence and neglect of a mandate solemnly undertaken, is now acting with energy.

Lord Rothermere's newspapers suggest that Britain should suppress this particular uprising and then repudiate the Palestine mandate, solemnly undertaken under the Balfour Declaration, and wash its hands of all responsibility in the Holy Land.

Lord Rothermere and the British Government should read again the text published at the beginning of this editorial.

When you undertake a task solemnly, encouraging tens of thousands of men and women from all over the world to take shelter under your protection and under your solemn promise, you cannot repudiate that promise so lightly.

What is more important, and hopeful for the Jews, is the fact that to take Lord Rothermere's advice would be DANGEROUS TO THE STANDING AND SAFETY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE.

To abandon Palestine to its fate, which is, of course, unthinkable, would be for the British to say to the Arabs:

"WE FEAR YOU, AND RETIRE BEFORE YOU."

The British Empire cannot afford to do that.

The British have little commercial or selfish financial interest in Palestine, it is true.

But Palestine is inhabited chiefly by Arabs, fanatical Mohammedans.

And the trail of Mohammedanism extends all the way from Jerusalem to Singapore.

The British have been earnest in accusing Russia's government of spreading discontent, and in fighting rebellion all along that "red trail."

Let the Mohammedans become convinced that the British fear them, or will not fight them and promptly suppress any outbreak, and there would be such massacres in India and other British possessions as would endanger the Empire's safety.

It is not in jest that savage Afghan chiefs of the mountains have said:

"IF IT WERE NOT FOR THE BRITISH, WE WOULD MURDER TWO-THIRDS OF THE HINDUS AND MAKE SLAVES OF THE REST."

But now, as in old days, the British have "got the men, got the ships (including airships), and got the money, too."

And however little they may relish being involved in a mandate, which suited them well after the war, they will find it prudent to live up to that mandate and give Jews in Palestine the protection that they have solemnly promised. Only thus can the British protect themselves from a Moslem outbreak that would cost them in men and money a thousand times what it would cost to make good the solemn promise made to the people of Palestine.

New Postoffice Again Subjected to a Delay

It is with disappointment Pittsburghers hear that another hitch in the building of a new postoffice here has developed. The present generation was in swaddling clothes when talk of a new building here was first heard, and while in the intervening years we have been getting closer and closer to realization of the project, something always occurs to set it back.

The newest delay comes from the reported objection of the local federal district attorney that the plans, approved by the postmaster general and the federal judges here, will require witnesses, attorneys and prisoners to walk 100 steps more than would be necessary if another plan was put through.

From this distance it does not appear to be an objection sound enough to delay start of construction. A local Babson, figuring the number of people who use the federal courtrooms as opposed to the number who seldom see the federal courtrooms, most likely would come up with statistics to show that the extra distance involved would mean nothing more to the average citizen than a half-foot a year. And perhaps not that much.

There must be very few citizens, anticipating jury or witness duties, who are lying awake at night worrying about the 100 extra steps that are said to perturb the local district attorney and which are holding up the plans. There is a chance that some of our hard-working attorneys and a considerable number of federal prisoners may string along with the present objection, but in this matter we should remember that many of the prisoners may have time enough to "rest" from the long walk, and that the attorneys, after all, are a rather hardy class of men.

In his regard for distance it is plain that the local federal district attorney has had little contact with the real estate men who upon looking at the 100 feet would convince him in jig time it is nothing but "a hop, skip and jump from the car line."

That we have been so long in getting a new postoffice is a reflection on Pittsburgh that it doesn't deserve.

Those 'Useless' Turnstiles

They'll "Come in Handy."

You have heard about the clergyman, offered $10,000 a year by a city church, when he was getting $2,000 in a country church.

An inquiring neighbor was told by the clergyman's little girl, "Father is in the library praying for light, mother is upstairs packing."

The street car companies of New York City, managed by very intelligent gentlemen, wanted an increase in fare. While lawyers were arguing it in court solemnly, the street car companies were ordering turnstiles, arranged to work at the increased fare rate. Something HAPPENED, they did not get their fare increase just THEN. But watch. They WILL get it. Big business and big money get what they want in the end.

Able French Women

They Understand Business and Politics.

The French Senate, old-fashioned and conservative, did not want women to vote.

The French Chamber of Deputies said French women must vote, and refused to pass a bill that the Senate wanted. So the Senate approved "votes for women."

Of all women on earth, French women are undoubtedly and eminently fitted for the ballot.

They work with their husbands, many of them run the finances of their husbands' business. Nearly all of them think about and understand public questions.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

HAVEN'T you some mean little traits that you make little effort to control?

The least of your efforts is made at home apparently.

Outside you desire, in, a way, to have others think you fine and so you do try rather indifferently to create a good impression among friends.

But when you are surrounded by just your own family, do you ever check your mean impulses and your sharp words?

Rather the facts seem to prove that your efforts to restrain yourself among outsiders causes you to exhibit more ill humor in the family circle.

Aroused among those outside your family, you can keep a calm xterior.

But opposed or irritated by those inside your threshold, you explode th great force.

Why vent your spleen on a blameless family?

As a matter of principle you ought to wish to keep your family in ood spirits and do something definite to accomplish a feeling of happiness at home.

The home should not be a dumping ground for your bad humor.

Even in families where conditions are normally happy, there is enough of annoyance without having to bring more when you come home.

Peter Delivered From Prison

(The Acts 12; 1-11)

NOW about that time Herod the king stretched forth his hands to vex certain of the church.

And he killed James the brother of John with the sword.

And because he saw it pleased the Jews, he proceeded further to take Peter also. (Then were the days of unleavened bread.)

And when he had apprehended him, he put him in prison, and delivered him to four quaternions of soldiers to keep him; intending after Easter to bring him forth to the people.

Peter therefore was kept in prison; but prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him.

And when Herod would have brought him forth, the same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains; and the keepers before the door kept the prison.

And, behold, the angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined in the prison; and he smote Peter on the side, and raised him up, saying, arise up quickly. And his chains fell off from his hands.

And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals. And so he did. An he saith unto him, Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me.

And he went out, and followed him; and wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; but thought he saw a vision.

When they were past the first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city; which opened to them of his own accord; and they went out, and passed on through one street, and forthwith the angel departed from him.

And when Peter was come to himself, he said, Now I know of a surety, that the Lord hath sent his angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

BENJAMIN'S MARROW BONES

By Herbert Kaufman

CONSIDER Benjamin Franklin, who thought of almost everything and made the MOST of nothing.

Opportunity showed him a larger line of samples than any prospect since Roger Bacon.

With the most fertile mind of his century, he was forever hatching possibilities and deserting the chicks in the nest.

Statesman and author, editor and scientist, inventor and philosopher, mechanic and publisher—he sprayed his industry and buttered his genius over so many fields that his talents could not completely saturate any.

His imagination had the appetite of a dozen intellects, but it was a roving, nibbling curiosity—a munching knowledge-hunger—with little preferential voracity. His brain was incurably polygamous, constantly wedding a new interest; enamoured in turn of each, and EVERLASTINGLY devoted to none.

He drew the Lamp of Aladdin from the clouds but did not give it a solitary rub. Radio, telephone, incandescent light and rapid transit were pass-keys on his kite—within the scope of his ingenuity.

PRESENT storehouses of power and energy were at his fingertips, as they were available when Archimedes angled for fleets from Hero's walls, and Chaldea made magic at Ur.

He designed the first practical coal stove, constructed the best pre-cylinder printing press, produced bi-focal spectacles, conducted a sprightly but thunderless newspaper, left behind an indelible collection of aphorisms (muchly cribbed from the Ancients), wrote an immortal biography, originated our postal service, and brilliantly filled two ambassadorships.

He might as easily have been a President of the United States, a Marcus Aurelius, a Horace Greeley, a Watts, Darwin or Edison. And with no GREAT effort, ALL of them in ONE.

But history inclines to regard him rather as a map-maker than explorer; fame prefers to place him with the scouts of achievement. He does not QUITE rank with Galileo or Newton, or the sires of astrolabe and compass.

HIS personality shoulders his performances from the spotlight. He looms among sober, Puritan-minded contemporaries like a vivid portrait on a wall of monochromes. Picturesque, colorful, glib and nimble-witted—his naive shallows and diplomatic depths inspired European enthusiasms that still largely decide the dimensions in which celebrity paints him.

Had he focused his gifts on a SINGLE objective, he should have become an ACETYLENE torch. He had much more fun being a SKYROCKET.

The grim, dull battles to be waged upon the quandaries which beset the quests of science (much as fabulous dragons beleaguer fairy castles), were not in his mood. He did not fancy the St. George lance. He was hardly of Bell's patient breed, or Ford's pertinacious stripe.

He was too versatile for DOGGEDNESS. If the bone was OVERHARD, he had plenty of others with EASIER reached marrow.

Most of us are like that—we regularly abandon feasible projects because they are not IMMEDIATELY seizable.

No track is so full of pickups as the trail to Yesterday. Seach it for "marrow bones."

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—Professional dog thieves have fallen on days of extremely thin picking. Twenty years ago dog stealing was a highly specialized racket in the metropolis. A clever canine crook could make from ten to fifteen thousand a year, big money then and nothing at which to sneer now.

The best of them fraternized with the high-toned confidence men, such as the celebrated Gondorf brothers and Paper Collar Joe. They frequented such celebrated bars as those in the old Waldorf and Hoffman House, had their elegantly dressed women and sported spanking bays.

Dogs in those days were stolen to order. The market place for the thievery was in a block near the old Haymarket on Sixth avenue. Scouts and runners were the whisky-voiced and red-nosed cabmen of the period. You told a cabman what kind of a dog you desired and next day it was delivered at a price.

The game was not so precarious as other forms of thefting. A dog was a dog and the breed and love of the owner were not so pronounced as today. As a rule the owner of a stolen dog was so glad to get back his pet there were no prosecutions.

In the 1890's some 500 dogs were stolen, swapped and sold during every 24 hours. Spotters marked homes in the aristocratic area where the pedigreed pug, the coach dog, the wire haired fox, the Boston bull or various other breeds of the time were housed.

Dogs went unmuzzled save during that so-called superstitious stretch known as "dog days." Too, there were innumerable yards about midtown where pets roamed loose. Walking off with a dog was comparatively easy. The thief jockeyed a dog into a passing cab and met the driver later to claim it.

When the leash law came to the statute books, there was a slowing up in the thefts, but the stolen dog market did not pass out of existence until about 10 years ago. The explanation why dogs can't be stolen these days is simple. Valuable dogs ride around inside limousines, and are locked in when left alone.

An old time noticer inquires if people are noticing that miles in judging distance are no longer used as a figure of measurement. No one these days, for instance, says Washington is so many miles from New York. Instead, it is so many hours' drive. All of which doesn't run up my temperature even on a blistering day.

A screech goes up among the dealers in women's summer dresses. Such articles have become outmoded to a big extent among sea shore lollers. The lady who used to buy them by the dozen now purchases a similar number of pajamas.

The Chinese chop suey craze along Broadway has spread to the "quick and dirties." Dairy lunches and sundry one-armed caravanseries display window cards calling attention to chicken chow mein and chop suey among the luncheon offerings. Incidentally, a statistician reports there are exactly eight times as many Chinese restaurants from Herald Square to West Seventy-second street as there were three years ago. Another link in the chain—or chink in the lane, if I cared to make you bust out laughing—is a series of Chinese breakfast parlors. Heretofore they have been serving only lunches and dinners. Breakfasts are mostly tea, crackers and candied preserves.

Every experienced stage performer has bad moments when he goes up in his lines and is helped over hurdles by frantic whispered asides from his fellows. One finished actor often goes for as long as four seasons without missing a clue or forgetting a sentence. When he does come a cropper he permits his understudy to take his role for a week. "It takes that long," he explains, "to get over my embarrassment."

"I am reliably informed," writes Mrs. T. G., "that you no longer write the articles in newspapers under your name but a cheaper writer is now doing it."

I have been wondering why they were so punk lately. But I love that "cheaper writer." Whoever he is, he probably receives at least two marbles and a skipping rope weekly.

"It won't be long now," telephones a smartie, "until you professional wonderers will be wondering whatever became of the girl who wore her skirt to her knees?" Well, what has become of her, as long as you are so worked up?

LIGHT VELOCITY

By Archibald Henderson

ONE of the most distinguished of living scientists is Prof. Albert A. Michelson, Nobel prize winner and head of the physics department of the University of Chicago. He is recognized today as the greatest living authority on the subject of light. The famous physical experiment, known as the Michelson-Morley experiment, which has been frequently repeated, demonstrated that there is no velocity of the ether relative to the earth. This experiment is one of the foundation stones of the towering structure of Relativity, erected by Einstein.

In 1927, Michelson made a series of minute experiments to determine the velocity of light. The light ray traveled from Mt. Wilson to Mt. Old Baldy peak. Elmer A. Sperry made some of the mirrors employed in the experiment, and supplied a source of light, the brightness of which literally equaled that of the sun. In this experiment Michelson used a revolving mirror disc, and it was a very difficult matter to measure the angular displacement of this disc. This measurement was effected with an accuracy of one part in 100,000.

The familiar figures, commonly used for light velocity until Michelson's experiment in 1927, were 300,000 kilometers per second, or 186,330 miles per second. In 1927, Michelson found that the velocity of light is 299,796 kilometers, or 186,284 miles per second.

Michelson is not repeating the experiment because of any doubt of the accuracy of the former measurements. He wishes merely to check them. Fortunately, he has devised a new method of effecting the experiment which affords an accuracy to the degree of one part in 1,000,000—or 10 times the accuracy of the former experiment.

The method of the experiment is simple in theory, and not difficult to understand. A pipe line half a mile long, to be laid in Ross Field, constitutes the theater of the experiment. The pipe, of corrugated iron, is 36 inches in diameter. The cost of the experiment may mount as high as $20,000.

The experiment is to be made by sending back and forth a beam of light within the pipe line. It is a game of super-tennis, with light as the ball and the mirrors as the racquets. The pipe line will constitute a vacuum, since the air will be pumped out of it, for conducting the experiment. The essential feature of the experiment is a rotating mirror with 32 prisms or faces. From the observing station, at one end of the pipe, a beam of light is reflected by the facet of the rotating mirror. The light is thus reflected to a mirror at the other end of the pipe line. From that mirror the light is reflected back along the path by which it went.

On its return, the light ray does not strike the same facet of the mirror which thrust it forward upon its initial journey. The mirror has been so rotated, by means of an air turbine, that the light ray on its return journey meets the very next facet of the mirror, whence it is reflected to the eyepiece of the observer.

The distance the light-ray travels, from mirror to mirror, at each end of the pipe line is carefully and accurately measured. Also the speed of the rotating mirror is easily determined. Consequently the length of the path of the light ray and the time taken to traverse this path are known. Hence it is a simple matter, from these data, to calculate the velocity of light. The velocity of light is thus determined by the rate of the rotation of the prism-like revolving mirror. The mirrors, in the apparatus used by Michelson, can make from 500 to 1,000 revolutions per second.
